HIGGINS DISCLOSES Mildred Donovan DEATH SECRETS

MOTHER'S STORY OF LOVE DUEL

Mrs. William J. Rounds of Cambridge told for the first time today to the AMERICAN her version of the love duel which her son, William J. Rounds, Jr., fought with Herbert B. Larner Wednesday night over the affections of his sister, Lillian.

Mrs. Rounds charges her daughter Lillian with breaking a promise made to her father not to see Larner more than once a week.

"Lillian broke her promise and this unfortunate affair is the result," said Mrs. Rounds.

"If my daughter Lillian had kept the promise she made to her father last Thanksgiving, it would never have happened.

"Herbert Larner has not been at our house since last Thanksgiving. He was never ordered away.

Larner Felt Hurt.

"Both Mr. Rounds and myself got after Lillian repeatedly about staying up late nights with Herbert. We told her when she had to get up early and go to school she ought to go to bed early and get her proper rest. We thought that 10 o'clock at night was the proper bedtime for her.

"But the nights that Herbert called on Lillian she would stay up until 11 o'clock, and sometimes as late as 12 o'clock. A good many times we had to call down stairs to her to come up to bed.

"On Thanksgiving Lillian and Herbert sat up late. Mr. Rounds went to the head of the stairway and called downstairs.

"'Come to bed, Lillian,' he said. 'Lillian, you had better come to bed,' he repeated. 'If Herbert wants to sit up all night, let him.'

"Herbert became insulted over this. There was no attempt to break up the friendship, even then, on our part. We had nothing against Herbert, nor have we today. We considered the attachment simply a boy and girl affair.

Wanted Them to Study More.

"We felt as we still feel that they both ought to give more time to their studies.

Boy Hit by Auto in Roxbury Dies from His Injuries

James D. McCarthy, aged seven, son of Mr. and Mrs. James McCarthy of No. 12 Gurney street, died of injuries he sustained today by being struck by an automobile at Tremont and Gurney streets, Roxbury. The auto was driven by Frederick Spain of No. 21 Chauncey place, Jamaica Plain, today. The boy was playing in the street.

The boy died while being carried to the City Hospital in the automobile that struck him. Spain then went to the Roxbury station, where he is detained by the police pending an investigation. John, a ten-year-old brother of the dead boy, was taken to the City Hospital for an operation this morning and another brother died a year ago.

Ahern, Missing Man, Found in Hospital, His Mind a Blank

A telephone message from Cohasset says that Fred E. Ahern, the young coal dealer who disappeared from Dover, N. H., on April 6, is in a hospital in a Western city suffering from a serious nervous breakdown. The mother of the young man has received a letter from him stating that he was too weak to travel, but would return to Cohasset as soon as he was stronger.

That the letter was in the handwriting of Mr. Ahern is the opinion of his mother, his wife and his brother, and the genuineness of the communication is not doubted.

Mr. Ahern wrote that he had just awakened from a period of confusion and that only a day or two ago did he realize that he was away from home and had any control over his impulses.

He stated that from the time of his arrival in the Knights of Columbus lodge rooms in Dover, on April 6, until he found himself in the hospital he had no recollection of where he had been or what he had been doing.

BIG SHAKE-UP IN BOSTON & MAINE MANAGEMENT DUE

A big shake-up in the administration board of the Boston & Maine Railroad was announced today. Many of the officials of that road who were formerly employed by the New Haven system are to be shifted at the beginning of the Summer schedule. The changes follow: General-Manager Pollock and Vice-President Horne return to the New Haven road.

C. S. Folsom, president of the St. Johnsbury and Lake Champlain road, is the new Vice-President of the Boston & Maine.

G. L. R. French, superintendent of the Rutland Railroad, becomes superintendent of the Portland Division of the Boston & Maine.

THINK CONVICTS HAVE DYNAMITE

SAN RAFAEL, Cal., April 18.—San Quentin penitentiary officials were startled yesterday by the discovery that 100 sticks of dynamite, 200 feet of fuse and about 600 fulminating caps have disappeared from the prison quarry magazine, located just outside the big stone wals. It is believed the explosive materials were stolen by prisoners.

SCHOONER ASHORE NEAR PORTSMOUTH

PORTSMOUTH, N. H., April 18.—The schooner Evolution, owned by the W. H. McElwain Company of Boston, ran ashore on the ledge of Jeffrey's Point today and with the tide receding at the time, was left high and dry on the rocks. Several tugs made a vain attempt to float her. Five of the crew remained on board, but will leave as soon as the water rises.

POPE IS STILL IN DANGER

ROME, April 18.—The condition of Pope Pius X. was today subject to conflicting reports. According to the morning bulletin of the doctors issued through the State department of the Roman Catholic Church, the Pontiff showed improvement and gave indications that his strong constitution would ultimately be able to overcome immediate danger.

On the other hand, information is gathered from another source that the Pontiff is still in a precarious condition, being extremely weak from lack of nourishment and from the cough which accompanied his attack of bronchitis.

In support of the latter report it is significant that Cardinal Oreglia, dean of the Holy See and Chamberlain to the Pope, has been notified to keep in readiness day and night to respond to a call from the Vatican.

The moderation of the Pope's temperature gave cause for hope at the Vatican, but he was again warned by Dr. Marchiafava not to overexert himself.

"Your Holiness must not confuse a temporary for a permanent improvement," explained Dr. Marchiafava.

At 10:30 the following bulletin was issued by Dr. Marchiafava and Dr. Amici:

Improvement is shown in the Pope's catarrhal affection. His general condition continues satisfactory. The temperature is 98.

In spite of his emaciated and weakened condition, the Pope sees humor in the constantly reiterated warnings of his doctors, and smiled as he promised to obey to the best of his judgment.

It was but a short forty-eight hours ago that the belief was general that the Pope's hours of life were numbered, and the amazing rally that he has made, chiefly through his determination to get well, has aroused wonder thoughout the world.

The life of Pope Pius X. was compared by his nephew, Monsignor Parolin, to a flickering lamp. The flame is wavering, now higher and now lower, and may be snuffed out at any minute.

"We hope for the best," Monsignor Parolin said, but the unmistakable signs of sorrow in his demeanor proved the forebodings in his mind.

TOKIO THOUSANDS CHEER CRY FOR WAR ON UNCLE SAM

TOKIO, April 18.—Without exception the responsible newspapers of Japan today ridiculed and tried to pass off as a joke the hysterical public meeting of last night, in which 20,000 persons wildly cheered a demand for war against the United States, should the alien land bill in California become a law.

For days the Tokio press has devoted columns to the proposed alien law and the mass meeting was largely a spontaneous affair, addressed by orators affiliated with no political organizations.

CRANE REFUSES RUSSIAN POST

WASHINGTON, April 18.—It was learned at the White House today that Charles R. Crane of Chicago, to whom the President has tendered the ambassadorship to Russia, will not accept the offer.

FIND ASTOR'S 'LAST WORD' ON BOARD AT SEA

A small board, bearing a pathetic message, scratched in the wood as though with the point of a nail, and signed "John J. Astor," was brought to this port today by Captain J. Willis of the British tramp freighter Longscar.

This scratched message is, as far as known, the very last farewell from the wreck of the White Star liner Titanic, which went down April 14, 1912.

The gallant death of Colonel John Jacob Astor, who left a young wife and an unborn child, was one of the tragedies which marked that greatest ocean disaster. Colonel Astor must have sent this final message when he realized the Titanic was sinking.

Captain Willis spied this board floating on the Atlantic as the Longscar was ploughing her way through the waters at about the latitude and longitude where the Titanic sank.

As soon as he arrived in Boston Captain Willis wired Mrs. Madeline Force Astor, the widow of the dead colonel, informing her of the message from the grave. He is holding the message for Mrs. Astor's eyes alone. A reply is expected hourly from Mrs. Astor.

PHONE GIRLS VOTE FOR PEACE BOARD

The Boston telephone operators today took a vote on the offer of an increase in wages and better working conditions by the New England Telephone and Telegraph Company and to name three girls to act with three persons named by the telephone company as an adjustment committee. This committee will settle any future questions of similar nature between the telephone company and the operators. The vote today was taken at the Women's Trade Union League rooms at No. 7 Warrenton street. The vote of the day operators will be taken tonight at Wells Memorial Hall.

SAYS EVIDENCE WOULD CONVICT

District Attorney John J. Higgins of Middlesex County said today that the State had enough evidence to convict James B. Jennings (Kid Carter) of the murder of Mrs. Mildred Donovan, even if Jennings had not made a confession.

HIGGINS INQUIRES ABOUT CONFESSION.

Mr. Higgins made this statement in connection with a visit he paid to District Attorney Joseph C. Pellitier of Suffolk. He was closeted with his Suffolk colleague for a half-hour, making personal inquiry into the Jennings confession.

The significance which the Middlesex prosecutor attaches to the confession and its developments were indicated by one thing, if by nothing else, that Mr. Higgins had left his East Cambridge office to come over to Suffolk courthouse personally. He had renewed his probe of the Donovan murder in person.

Blame Placed on Jennings.

It was also learned through Mr. Higgins that the inquest on Mildred Donovan had placed the blame for her death on Jennings. This is the first time this inquest finding has been given out. It was not made public while Jennings was on trial for the murder of William M. MacPherson, in order that Jennings' rights as a defendant might not be prejudiced.

But a warrant charging Jennings with the murder of Mildred Donovan had been sworn out and had been given to Police Inspector Greenleaf of Malden.

At the very moment when the MacPherson murder jury filed into court to render its verdict against Jennings in that case, Inspector Greenleaf sat in the courtroom, with the Donovan warrant in his pocket.

The MacPherson jury said "guilty" against Jennings. If the jury verdict had been "Not guilty," Jennings would have been arrested at once.

Was Investigating Case.

While Mr. Higgins was conferring with Mr. Pelletier, State Officer Silas P. Smith, who is attached to Mr. Higgins' office, was already investigating one end of the new Donovan probe. Smith called on Frank A. Menard of Revere, stepfather of Mildred Donovan, who has called for vengeance for the murder of his stepdaughter. Smith made a number of inquiries of Mr. Menard. These inquiries, it is understood, related to certain points in Jennings' confession.

Mr. Higgins came over from East Cambridge to Boston in good season. He went to the State House for a few moments, then stepped over to the Suffolk courthouse nearby. He went to the second floor where the offices of District Attorney Pelletier are located. In the outer office he asked to see Mr. Pelletier and gave his card to James Wolff, one of the office clerks.

Mr. Higgins was shown immediately into Mr. Pelletier's private office. He came out at the end of a half-hour. While he would not discuss his talk in detail, he said:

"Yes, I am working on the Jennings case personally. I am not ready to say yet whether I shall proceed against Jennings on the strength of his confession. I wish to consider the matter.

"I will say that the State had evidence enough to convict Jennings of the murder of Mrs. Donovan, even if he had not made a confession.

Warrant Was Issued.

"I can tell you this, Jennings' statement that he strangled the woman for eighteen minutes is not true.

"The inquest report on Mildred Donovan lays the blame for her death on James B. Jennings. The finding was that Mildred Donovan died of asphyxiation, caused by blood from a wound on her nose made by Jennings.

"There is a warrant out for Jennings' arrest, charging him with Mrs. Donovan's murder.

"On the day that the Suffolk County jury reported a finding of guilty against Jennings in the McPherson case, Inspector Greenleaf of Malden police was in the courtroom with the warrant in his pocket.

SCHOOL GIRLS ARE RUN OVER BY AUTOMOBILE

WEST BRIDGEWATER, April 18.—Four school girls were knocked down and run over today by an automobile owned and driven by J. H. Farris, a Brockton printer. Two of the girls were unconscious and had to be removed to the hospital. The other two were carried to their homes in a semi-conscious condition. The injured are:

CATHERINE O'NEIL, seventeen, unconscious at the Brockton Hospital. Lacerated head, legs and arms. Skull fractured.

AGNES HENNESSEY, fifteen, fractured collar bone. Gained consciousness at Brockton Hospital.

MARGARET LUDDY, fourteen, carried to her home considerably bruised and shaken up.

MAY LUDDY, seventeen, removed to her home with many contusions about the body.

Farris ran down the girls when he attempted to pass a team on the road. He stated that he blew his automobile horn, but the girls say the horn was not sounded.

DANDRUFF AND SCALP TROUBLE

Caused Itching, Burning and Falling Out of Hair. Scratched Head in Sleep. Hair Dry and Looked Dead. Ashamed to be Seen in Public Bare-headed. Cuticura Soap and Ointment Cured.

R. F. D. No. 1, New Milford, Ct.—"For three years I was troubled with dandruff and scalp trouble. Dandruff covered my head which caused itching, burning and falling out of my hair. I scratched my head in my sleep and awoke with my scalp bruised. My hair was dry and looked dead and at times it came out so badly that I thought I would have none left. I was ashamed to be seen in public bare-headed because the dandruff showed through the hair.

"I tried several remedies but they did not prove successful. Sometime ago I saw in the paper an advertisement about Cuticura Soap and Ointment and I sent for some. I used the Cuticura Soap and Ointment for two months and they cured me." (Signed) Miss B. Wegloske, Oct. 15, 1912.

A generation of mothers has found no soap so well suited for cleansing and purifying the skin and hair of infants and children as Cuticura Soap. Its absolute purity and refreshing fragrance alone are enough to recommend it above ordinary skin soaps, but there are added to those qualities delicate yet effective emollient properties, derived from Cuticura Ointment, which render it most valuable in overcoming a tendency to distressing eruptions and promoting a normal condition of skin and hair health. Sold everywhere. Liberal sample of each mailed free, with 32-p. book. Address post-card "Cuticura, Dept. T, Boston."

☞Men who shave and shampoo with Cuticura Soap will find it best for skin and scalp.

Pupils in West End Thrive on 2-Cent Lunch

A wholesome lunch at a cost of 2 cents and plenty of fresh air have brought pink cheeks and happy smiles to the faces of thirty-five pupils in Miss Helen R. Baldrey's West End open-air school room.

"It is not alone the fresh air that causes our children to gain so rapidly," said Miss Baldrey. "Their health comes partly from the fact that each day they are served with the best and most wholesome lunch that can be provided for two pennes. It may seem exaggerated when I state that we supply this lunch without expense to the City of Boston and all that any child pays is 10 cents a week.

"Our menu consists of tomato or chicken soup, crackers, cocoa, malted milk, prunes, peanuts, peanut butter, sweet chocolate and lump sugar. Of course we vary the lunch from day to day. The work is done by the school matron."

"In all the years I have taught school I used never to go through a season without having to be out a number of days on account of illness. I would get fearfully tired toward the end of the day and by Springtime it would be all I cared to do to pull through with the day's work. I have now taught the open-air school for two seasons and never felt better in my life. I hardly know when the time to close has come, and I go home almost as rested as when I came in the morning."

MISSOURI JUDGE CLOSES CABARETS

KANSAS CITY, Mo., April 18.—"The cafes must keep young women out of their places at night," said Police Judge Burney today as he ordered five so-called "cabaret" cafes closed. Judge Burney said he was determined either to regulate cafes or put them out of business. The closing followed a raid on eight of the principal "cabarets" in which fifty-four women were found.

MRS. BELMONT TO HAVE JAP TEAHOUSE

NEWPORT, R. I., April 18.—Plans were filed with Building Inspector Mortimer Sullivan today for a large Japanese tea house, which Mrs. O. H. P. Belmont is going to have built on the edge of the Cliff walk on the grounds of her villa, Marble House. It will be furnished with luxurious hangings and furnishings of Oriental splendor.

BRITISH SHIP IS STILL ON FIRE

MRS. ROUNDS' OWN STORY OF THE LOVE DUEL

Lillian was allowed to see Herbert once a week. She was even allowed to name what night in the week that should be. She chose Friday nights.

"We allowed her to go to dances or to the theatre on that night with Herbert.

"But in spite of the promise she made her father and me to be satisfied with seeing Herbert this one night in the week, we know now she has been constantly meeting Herbert.

"Lillian's father acted squarely and honorably with her. She did not keep her promise. This is the result.

"Do you believe your son Billy used a knife on Herbert Larner?" Mrs. Rounds was asked.

"I only know what I have heard. It doesn't seem possible that my boy would do such a thing. I certainly do not sanction such actions in my boy or any other.

Says Finger Was Bitten.

"I am sorry now that Mr. Rounds and Mr. Larner did not whip both Herbert and Lillian. It would have broughht them to their senses.

"Billy told me he did not do anything wrong to Herbert until he found he was getting the worst of the fight, and then he said he was acting in self-defence.

"Billy is all used up over the unfortunate affair. He has a bad bite on the finger which Dr. Cleary says is a bite and not a knife wound. You know Herbert is much larger than Billy. Herbert weighs 168 pounds. Billy weighs only about 145.

"Yes, Lillian is home with us. She has been allowed to go to the hospital to see Herbert, but the hospital authorities would not allow her to see him.

"I really think that when the boys and girls went out Wednesday night they expected to have nothing but a boys' quarrel with fists. I knew the girls never dreamed of such an ending. It doesn't seem natural that girls could stand idly by and watch two boys fight, as Billy and Herbert did."

"Are Lillian and Herbert Larner engaged?" Mrs. Rounds was asked.

"If they are, I don't know anything about it. The pair are too young to be engaged. They ought to be at their studies."

"But Lilin wears two rings," was suggested, "a diamond on the third finger of her left hand and a blue stone ring on another finger."

The Rings Worn by Girl.

"The diamond ring was given Lillian by her father," explained Mrs. Rounds, "when she graduated from the grammar school. It has always been Mr. Rounds' custom to give a diamond ring to his children at that time. The blue stone ring was given to Lillian last Christmas as a Christmas present by Lillian's sister Fannie.

"If Lillian wears that ring on the third finger of her left hand, and I never noticed that she did, she has no right to do so."

"Lillian claims, said the AMERICAN reporter, "that last Tuesday night her brother Billy struck her with a scissors? What about that?"

"I wasn't here last Tuesday night, for Mr. Rounds and I went to the theatre and then to dinner and did not return until late.

"Did they quarrel? Of course they did, like all brothers and sisters.

"Would Lillian testify against her brother in court for Herbert?"

"Honestly, I cannot tell what Lillian might do, since she broke her promise in the other matter. I do hope, though, the need of such a happening will never arise, and that some amicable arrangement may be made by which this unfortunate affair may be brought to a happy settlement."

ANOTHER VICTORY IN THE CRUSADE FOR PURE FOOD

Harry P. Cassidy and the AMERICAN scored another success in the crusade for pure food in Massachusetts today when the legislative Committee on Public Health reported favorably on Mr. Cassidy's bill prohibiting the use of coloring matter, the use of more than 2 per cent. of cereals or substances containing more than 8 per cent. of water in the manufacture of sausage. The measure will come up for action in the Legislature in a few weeks.

The same committee referred to the next General Court Mayor Fitzgerald's bill to define "milk" and "pure milk."

EX-WIFE TELLS LOVE IN 'ENOCH ARDEN' CASE

Mrs. Elizabeth T. Woodbury-Beals, the story of whose marriage complications is an "Enoch Arden" romance in real life, on the witness stand in the trial of her civil suit against Milton A. Woodbury, the cafe manager, and her former husband, declared that she still loves Woodbury. She said that on eleven different occasions she had pawned rings to get money to lend him, and told of numerous other times when she loaned him various sums of money.

Mrs. Beals is suing Woodbury for $1,730.48, which she says is due her for board, room rent and loans during the time she was living with Woodbury as his wife. Woodbury recently had this marriage annulled after the woman's first husband, whom she believed dead, "came to life." Mrs. Beals divorced her first husband last month, following the annulment of her marriage to Woodbury.

Confesses Old Love.

Mrs. Beals broke down and wept at one time on the stand. She said:

"I am sorry to confess that I still love Mr. Woodbury. I loved him when I married him and I do now."

After this remarkable confession of love, the wife told of the reappearance of her first husband, Charles H. Beals, last October, after he had been missing for seventeen years. She said that after his return she had lived with Beals as his wife for three weeks in the Back Bay, and had later lived with him in Moreland street, Roxbury.

The case attracted spectators who filled the courtroom. Former Assistant United States Attorney-General W. H. Lewis is one of the lawyers for Woodbury. The trial is before Judge Hitchcock and jury in the Suffolk Superior Court.

"On one occasion Mr. Woodbury gave me a check for $31," Mrs. Beals testified. "But it was on condition that I would at once repay it.

"I made many loans to him. From March, 1910, till the Summer of 1911, I loaned him about $400, which I secured by pawning one after another of her rings.

Tells of Pawning Rings.

"In three months I gave him $20 every week when he opened his moving picture theatre in Somerville and I helped fix it out. He asked me to let the rent of my lodging house go and give him the money instead of to my landlord, and I did so. The house was at No. 563 Massachusetts avenue.

"After we moved to Somerville I gave him the $25 deposit I received for the sale of the furniture of the lodging house. He never returned it. Later I loaned him $25 and again $100.

New England Conference for Boston, April 23

After telephone consultation with Governor Foss today, Governor Baldwin of Connecticut, chairman of the New England railroad conference, decided to call the next session of the conference at the State House in Boston, Wednesday, April 23.

Governor Haines, of Maine, is expected to name two delegates and all States in New England except New Hampshire have already named delegates to the conference. The New Hampshire delegates will be named shortly, it is understood. The conference is expected to take up matters pertaining to the relation of the railroads to the New England States with an idea of securing concerted action by the various States interested.

CHINESE AT YALE TO ESCAPE LATIN

NEW HAVEN, April 18.—It is likely that classical Chinese will be substituted in the entrance requirements for Oriental students at Yale in place of Latin. The change has been discussed at a faculty meeting and is made because of the difficulty of mastering Latin on the part of Chinese and other Oriental students. It is expected that this change will make entrance to Yale more attractive to Oriental students.

HOUSE KILLS 'STRAW VOTE' SUFFRAGE BILL

The "Straw Vote Suffrage Bill," which has been rigorously opposed by suffrage leaders, was killed in the House of Representatives this afternoon by a vote of 73 to 117.

The measure provided that the woman suffrage question should be referred to the voters in order that they might express their opinion on granting women the vote. It further provided that women as well as men qualified to vote for school committee should be eligible to vote on the question.

Another bill, which provided that only men could vote on the propositon, was also rejected by the House.

For the first time this session Speaker Grafton L. Cushing of the House personally took the floor in order to snap the party Republican machine whip in favor of the bill providing for an expression of opinion by the voters on the question of equal suffrage.

BIGAMY CASE INVESTIGATED IN SOMERVILLE

Attorney F. A. F. Fiske of the Somerville School Board is investigating the charges of bigamy to be filed in Indiana by Mrs. James Russell Smith of Somerville against her husband, who is reported to have married a Terre Haute girl of prominent family under an assumed name.

He is now in communication with Frank J. Foley, deputy prosecuting attorney of the 43d judicial district of Indiana, who is investigating the marriage of a "James R. Russell" to the Terre Haute girl.

BURNS DROPS OUT OF THE MILLIONAIRE MARTIN MYSTERY

LONDON, April 18.—Detective William J. Burns today withdrew from the search for Joseph W. Martin, the missing Memphis, Tenn., cotton broker, who strangely dropped out of sight on the night of April 3. Some mystery attended the withdrawal of the famous American detective, although his action was not entirely unexpected.

The offer of a reward for Martin previously issued by J. Lockhart Anderson, the English friend of the missing American, has already been withdrawn.

Private detectives working on the case declare that Martin is alive and that he was not forcibly kidnaped.

EATON INQUEST MAY GET STORY OF AINSWORTH

D. H. Ainsworth, the first husband of Mrs. Jennie May Eaton, is expected to be one of the important witnesses when the inquest on the death of Rear Admiral Eaton is reopened. In addition, a number of other new witnesses are expected soon to be summonsed, as the government is proceeding rapidly with its plans to obtain new light on the poison mystery.

District Attorney Barker expects to proceed with the new inquiry in a little more than a week's time. He is reported to know the whereabouts of Ainsworth and to be ready to produce him when his testimony is wanted.

Attorneys Morse and Geogan, for the defence, will have a conference today in Rockland and will then visit Mrs. Eaton at the Plymouth jail. The lawyers will also go to the Eaton home to consult with other members of the family.

A test of the sanity of Mrs. Eaton, the accused widow, has been definitely decided upon, it is understood.

New evidence as to the last forty-eight hours of Admiral Eaton's life is declared to have been discovered and it is reported that much of this will be brought out at the inquest.

The government is reported to be endeavoring to learn just how poison may have been given Admiral Eaton. It is understood to have been established that the family drank tea and coffee from the same tea and coffee pots and that it was impossible for any poison to get into the Admiral's cup.

BOOTS AND SHOES STAY ON FREE LIST

WASHINGTON, April 18.—In the Democratic House caucus today Representative Phelan of Massachusetts offered an amendment to the tariff bill to transfer boots and shoes from the free list and make them dutiable at 5 per cent. The amendment was lost without a division being demanded.

Spa Beauty Bride as Friends Wait for Wedding Day

Keeping their wedding day a secret, Miss Lillian Burdette Frederick, known as the prettiest girl at Thompson's Spa, and James F. Bailey, a Boston real estate man, whose home is in Allston, have been married and are now on their wedding trip. The ceremony was performed yesterday by Rev. John O. Harrvig, pastor of the Swedish Lutheran Church of Allston, at his parsonage. The couple had no attendants.

Miss Frederick was a clerk at Thompson's Spa, where Mr. Bailey took lunch every noon. The couple announced their engagement at the same time that Miss Frederick resigned her position.

The marriage license gives the bride's age as twenty-six. It is her first marriage. The bridegroom's age is given as twenty-eight and it is his second marriage. He is divorced.

PEANUT HARVEST BY PEDESTRIANS; 500 POUNDS OF 'EM

Five hundred pounds of peanuts, culled and hulled on the goober soil of Virginia, were harvested by shoppers and plain pedestrians along Washington street today. For several minutes it simply April-showered peanuts. Here is how it happened:

The peanuts stood mountain high behind a big plate glass window in front of the store No. 558 Washington street. All of a sudden with a crash, the window gave way under the peanut pressure, and glass and peanuts flowed onto the sidewalk.

Finally, after small boys had fattened out their pockets with the peanuts, the rest of the goober deluge was cleaned away by employes.

PATERSON SILK STRIKE VIOLENCE

PATERSON, N. J., April 18.—Paterson's great silk industry today faces the crisis in the strike of 27,000 workers. Rendered desperate by more than eight weeks of idleness in certain branches of the industry, the strikers have become daily more difficult to restrain, particularly the dyers and their helpers. These men form the bulk of the unskilled labor and, as in previous silk strikes, have been the first to resort to violence.

NEWSBOYS' CLUB SUNLIGHT SOCIAL

Tomorrow afternoon the Happy Twenty, composed of the senior members of the Boston Newsboys' Club, will hold their annual sunlight social at St. James Hall, corner of Huntington and Massachusetts avenues. Dancing will be from 2 to 6. Full returns of the Farathon race will be announced. "Tige" Waldman is to be floor director.

'LITTLE BOY BLUE' FOUND; HUNT KIDNAPER

"Little Boy Blue" is safe at home again. Little Boy Blue is four-year-old Curtis Rexford, son of Mrs. Mary Rexford, of No. 4 Ernst street, who was lured away by a man for whom the police are today searching.

Clad in his "Little Boy Blue" suit, by means of which the AMERICAN was able to assist in finding him for his frantic mother, he was discovered by people who had read the story of his disappearance, on Broadway, near C street, in South Boston. He said to a reporter:

> My mama was in a store, and I went outside. A man with gray hair took me over a bridge. I saw a lot of water and the man said you can drive the horsies and I did.
>
> I wanted my mama, but I didn't know where I could find her, but I'm awful glad to be with her and I never will let anyone else try and take me again.

The little boy told his mother that the man gave him, or tried to give him, some whiskey.

Mrs. Rexford had been making a purchase in a store, and came out to find her child missing. She made a frantic search of the neighborhood and then notified police headquarters and Captain Driscoll of the Dedham street station. She had been informed by a little girl at Washington and Cobb streets that the boy had gone away with a man with grayish hair and a derby hat, but in what direction the girl did not know.

These facts were told to Captain Driscoll and within five minutes every one of the eighteen police stations and stations of cities and towns surrounding this city were notified to be on the lookout for the "Little Boy Blue" and the mysterious man.

As the best means of informing the public of the disappearance of her son, Mrs. Rexford came to the AMERICAN office and asked for help in the search. She was heartbroken and wept bitterly. Shortly after the newspapers were on the street, the little fellow was found in South Boston and within one-half hour afterwards Mrs. Rexford went to South Boston and claimed her son.

OSCAR WILDE SEQUEL DRAWS LONDON WOMEN

LONDON, April 18.—Society women in great numbers struggled and fought today to get into the high court building, for the resumption of the libel action of Lord Alfred Douglas against Arthur Ransome, an author, because of statements made in the latter's book, "Oscar Wilde; a Critical Study."

The court room was packed when the trial was resumed and there was a breathless hush so that none of the testimony might escape the ears of the audience. Lord Alfred Douglas continued making violent and passionate protests against the reading of letters which passed between him and his friend Wilde. Despite the protests, however, many letters were read. When Lord Alfred objected because a forgotten scandal was being brought up, Justice Darling reminded him that he had brought the suit.

Lord Alfred Douglas is a brother of the Marquis of Queensberry. His charge is that Mr. Ransome's book accused him as the man to whom Wilde felt he owed some of the circumstances of his disgrace. The plaintiff testified that at the time he was Wilde's chum he had no religion, but said that since Wilde's death he had beocme a Catholic. Speaking of Wilde's extravagance, he said:

"You could give him $1,000 on a Saturday night, and on Monday morning he would be around looking for breakfast money."

CIGARETTE FIRES A STORE AWNING

A lighted cigarette, a flaming awning and a hand extinguisher attracted several thousand people at Washington and Water streets today, when the awning outside the store of the Frank A. MAINE MEMORIAL FUND SWELLED BY ACTRESSES AT BIG LEAGUE GAME

The Maine Memorial Fund is $80.78 richer as a result of the generous efforts of a band of show girls at the National League game yesterday, and the liberality of the patrons.

A most remarkable demonstration of collecting, cajoling, coaxing and persuading was given by the pretty girls from the "Firefly" company at the Shubert and the Aborn opera singers from the Tremont.

The players in the brass band which graced the opening day were not even exempt, while Mayor Fitzgerald had to borrow carfare to get back to town after the girls had interviewed him.

The Maine Memorial collectors started from their respective theatres in automobiles kindly furnished by the Rambler and White companies and a Cole car furnished by Henry Habich of E. J.-H. G. Habich, local distributors of the Cole cars.

All the girls from the "Firefly" troupe had white silk badges bearing the inscription, "We put the fire in "Firefly." They bore big signs reading, "Contribute to the Maine Memorial Fund."

The Aborn girls also had flags and banners. Each had pinned to her coat a gentleman's sock of some bright color. The contributions were deposited in the socks as they were received.

Rivalry Between Teams.

Through the kindness of the club management the girls were provided with box seats, but they did not occupy them until the game was well advanced. For an hour before the "play ball" sign was given they were busy collecting.

The AMERICAN furnished them with copies of its papers and the entire proceeds of the sales were contributed to the fund. More than eight hundred papers were sold by the girls and the average price paid was ten cents.

The "Firefly" girls included Frankie Farrell, Marie Granby, Mary Cassel, Grace Noble, Bess Stivers, Miss Vance, Louie Ducie. The Aborn girls were Helen Hennesy, Miss Wallsingham, Lillian Harris, Valerie Marlowe, Ethel Gardner.

Right away a friendly rivalry arose between the two teams to see which would get the most money. The first girl to get a paper sold it instantly to a man from City Hall and received a $2 bill. That was the largest single contribution.

Mayor Fitzgerald was assailed by the entire troupe. He bought half a dozen papers.

Two Papers for Dollar.

John I. Taylor, part owner of the Red Sox, was spotted and a girl said:

"I've only two papers left. Sell them to you for a dollar."

"You're on," the magnate replied, and paid.

Street Commissioner Gallivan and many another notable was treated in the same manner.

The following is the standing of the collectors:

Frankie Farrell, "Firefly"	$ 12.98
Miss Wallsingham, Aborns	10.01
Helen Hennesy, "Firefly"	9.04
Ethel Gardner, Aborns	7.41
Mary Cassel, "Firefly"	7.25
Grace Noble, "Firefly"	6.80
Bess Stivers, "Firefly"	5.44
Lillian Harris, Aborns	4.62
Valerie Marlowe, Aborns	4.19
Lou Ducie, "Firefly"	2.55
Miss Vance, Aborns	1.34
Total	$ 80.78
Other receipts yesterday:

LESSON OF MAINE'S HEROES INVALUABLE, CONRY DECLARES

Joseph A. Conry, Director of the Port of Boston, in contributing to the Maine Memorial Fund has struck a new and effective note by tracing the connection between the destruction of the battleship Maine in Havana Harbor and the construction of the Panama Canal. He writes as follows:

Conry Honors Heroes.

Editor AMERICAN:

I enclose you herewith my contribution to the Maine Memorial.

The destruction of the Maine in Havana Harbor in 1898 marks the beginning of an epoch to which the construction of the Panama Canal comes as a climax.

American enery, more or less in repose since Appomatox, stirred by the blood of the Maine men, demanded action, and a free Cuba was followed by the Panama Canal.

The Monroe Doctrine is the product of John Quincy Adams, a Massachusetts man. We are proud of our share in that doctrine, as we are in our share of the material development of the Western Hemisphere.

And while American genius and American capital will continue to be powerful factors in the development of this hemisphere, genius and capital must ever look for support and protection to the courage of American manhood. This is the manhood which is honored when we properly "Remember the Maine."

Yours very truly,
JOSEPH A. CONRY.

Fear is expressed at Harvard today that Sylvanus Griswold Morley, Harvard student and recognized authority on Central American history, and his companion, J. H. SUFFRAGIST WOMEN TAKE BILLINGSGATE

LONDON, April 18.—Militant suffragists today took possession of the famous Billingsgate monument in the fish market district of London, just south of London Bridge, and for several hours rained suffragette literature and missiles on the crowd beneath, stopping all trains, vehicles and foot traffic in the streets. The women alternated their cannonade of pamphlets with screams of "Votes for women" and "Victory or death," while the fish vendors in the streets below, enraged at the interruption of business, replied in that kind of language which has made "Billingsgate" famous the world over.

In addition to hurt feelings, some of the fisher merchants suffered physical injuries.

QUIT CALOMEL!

Thousands Are Turning from This Dangerous Drug.

A Safe Vegetable Substitute Is Olive Tablets for the Liver.

Dr. F. M. Edwards, a prominent physician of Ohio, has discovered a new laxative and liver toner in a combination of vegetable materials, mixed with olive oil, which is, in effect, almost exactly like the old and untrustworthy calomel, except that there are none of the bad after effects of calomel

Dr. Edwards has long been a foe of calomel, though he recognized its value along with its dangers.

His distrust of the uncertain drug eventually started him years ago towards experiments with the view of discovering a substitute, and he is today in possession of the long-sought-for combination, which is in the shape of a little sugar-coated, olive oil colored tablet.

The results of 17 years' experience and practice are embodied in these marvelous little tablets.

They are called Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets. They oil the bowels, and their effect on the liver has been the means of relief to many of Dr. Edwards' regular patients as well as to thousands of others who have suffered and were afraid of calomel.

They are gentle in their action, yet always effective. They bring about that exuberance of spirit, that natural buoyancy which should be enjoyed by everyone, by toning up the liver and clearing the system of harmful impurities. 10c and 25c per box.

400,000 NOW OUT IN GREAT BELGIAN STRIKE

BRUSSELS, April 18.—With more than 400,000 men idle in the National Manhood Suffrage strike, Socialist leaders boasted today that they would "tie Belgium up tight" before the first of next week.

The strike up to date has cost, in all its aspects, approximately $25,000,000. It is estimated that workmen are losing $360,000 to $400,000 in wages each day.

The government admits that at least 400,000 workmen are out, although all of the men did not strike voluntarily. Many workmen, members of non-Socialist unions which did not favor the walkout, were forced out of employment by the shutting down of factories on account of shortage of fuel.

Paralysis of shipping at Antwerp is threatened, the situation there having become acutely worse in the past twenty four hours. Orders are being refused by the great Cockerill iron and machine works at Seraing.

Members of the Typographical Union have postponed the date of their walkout until tomorrow.

Violence is reported from Charatte, near Liege, where strikers destroyed a large amount of property before they were dispersed by cavalry.

Rioting in which half a dozen strikers were seriously wounded, occurred at Seraing and Cheratte. Socialist strikers attacked several plants of the Cockerill interests at Seraing, and at Cheratte a glass factory was attacked. The mobs drove off the police and troops of cavalry were summoned from the local barracks. The rioters were charged and dispersed.

Negro members of ships belonging to the Hamburg-American line were pressed into service at Antwerp today to take the place of striking stevedores. The situation here is rapidly becoming acute. Many more dockworkers have joined the strike and the Socialists are trying to extend the movement to the seamen's union. It is feared that shipping schedules will soon be completely disarranged.

One thousand workmen at Herve joined the strike today.

A wealthy manufacturer at La Louviere took charge of the feeding of 2,000 children of strikers in his own factory.

Expect 2,000 People at Sacred Heart Reunion in Newton

It is expected that over 2,000 persons from all parts of Greater Boston will attend the reunion of the Church of the Sacred Heart, Newton Centre, to be held this evening in Bray Hall, Newton Centre. The affair will be given under the direction of the pastor of the church, the Rev. D. C. Riordan, and the assistant pastor, the Rev. J. C. Haney, assisted by a committee comprising over 200 members of the parish.

Two halls will be used for the reunion. Both will be decorated and will contain the booths and tables which will be in charge of the young ladies of the church. There will be dancing in the large hall and whist in the smaller one.

Mrs. Alexander White will be the chairlady of the committee on arrangements, and two of her able assistants will be the Misses Mary Barry and Edith Moore.

SAY NANCY STORY WAS OVERDRAWN

PARIS, April 18.—In their report to the government today the authorities who investigated the "Nancy incident," state that the reports of indignities to German tourists by French students were greatly exaggerated, especially in the Berlin press. However, the French authorities were held to be negligent in having failed to provide the German men and women travelers with proper safeguards.

FRIEDMANN SAYS HE CANNOT ANSWER ALL HIS CRITICS

PROVIDENCE, April 18.—Dr. Friedmann refused to reply to the statement printed today that the eighteen consumptives he treated at Seton Hospital, New York, have not showed signs that would in any way point to an ultimate cure.

"I haven't got time to answer all my critics."

Dr. Maurice A. Sturm, Dr. Friedmann's adviser, declared that the eighteen patients will all be given a second treatment at his office in New York within a short time. Dr. Friedmann and Dr. Sturm will leave for New York at 6 o'clock tonight.

Dr. Sturm later announced that Dr. W. G. Dwinnell of this city would be the Rhode Island distributor of the Friedmann serum. Dr. Friedmann refused to affirm or deny the report that he is making negotiations to market his vaccine for tuberculosis. Later he practically admitted that negotiations are under way by saying:

"Nothing has as yet been done, but in a short time the matter will be all arranged."

Bird Battle for Nest Halts Court at East Cambridge

The war-cries and impolite bird language in a Balkan battle between three bluebirds and a sparrow army, over the heads of spectators and witnesses in the East Cambridge Superior Courtroom, caused Judge Irwin to halt the session of his court today and ordered the embattled hosts driven out of the windows.

The bluebirds had won possession of a nest yesterday in a big chandelier in the courtroom by ousting two sparrows that had formerly been lord and lady of the manor. Lord and Lady Sparrow flew into the windows today, leading a vanguard of twittering friends.

"You're jays, all of you," said General Sparrow to the bluebird trio.

Judge Irwin commanded Deputy Sheriff Bert Adams to get busy. Adams got a stepladder and a long pole. Mounting the ladder, he bombarded the chandelier with shot and shrapnel until both bird armies were routed in confusion.

VIENNA, April 18.—It was reliably reported here today that the international fleet which has been blockading the Montenegrin coast will land a detachment of troops, if Montenegro does not comply with the powers' demand to cease bombarding Scutari.

The Nue Freie Presse announces that the Balkan allies (with the exception of Montenegro), are expected to hand a circular note to the powers today accepting the proposals relative to peace.

A telegram from Cattaro states that the Montenegrin attack upon Scutari is going on as vigorously as ever.

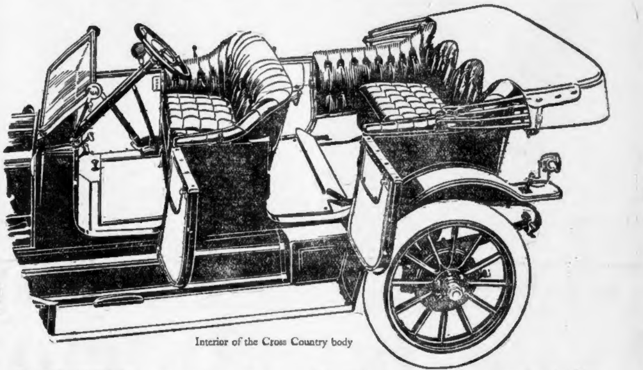
Step into This Car and you will know Real Comfort



Interior of the Cross Country body

THERE is something rare and inviting about the comfort of the Cross Country that once it is experienced you will never quite forget. You enter through wide doors—20½ inches—that open fully, stepping easily from a running board that is clear.

The broad, carpet-covered foot rest in the tonneau is in just the right position for thorough relaxation. You sink down into the deep upholstery and lean back to find the pitch just right for perfect ease. The steady, deliberate action of the springs gives to one that pleasurable sense of modulated motion undisturbed by any jar. The forward seats are just the right height and the steering pillar may be adjusted at any angle to suit the comfort of the operator.

The hands rest comfortably on the steering wheel and the foot accelerator is so conveniently located and shaped that pressure may be applied with any part of the foot, always avoiding a cramped position.

You must experience the feel of the Cross Country wheel. It's a delight. It turns without a single vibrating jar. Your arms don't tire, your legs don't cramp.

To drive this car is exhilarating. Press the button with your foot. With hardly an audible sound the motor starts. A single movement of the lever—you touch the throttle and it's away.

Drive the car for ten minutes and you will grin in spite of yourself through rare delight.

A beautiful four-color reproduction of the Cross Country, from an oil painting by R. Philip Brainard, is ready for mailing. See the Cross Country by all means, at any Jeffery branch or dealer's display room, but send for the picture anyway.

Players Sore Over 10-Inning Loss

THE BATTING ORDER FOR TODAY.

PILGRIMS.	GIANTS.
Connelly, left field.	Snodgrass, centre field.
Maranville, shortstop.	Fletcher, shortstop.
H. Meyers, first base.	Burns, right field.
Sweeney, second base.	Doyle, second base.
Titus, right field.	Murray, left field.
Devlin, third base.	Merkle, first base.
Jackson, centre field.	Herzog, third base.
Rariden, catcher.	J. Meyers, catcher.
Tyler, pitcher.	Demaree, pitcher.

By L. R. MURDOCH.

IF

Christy Mathewson stays on the bench;
Larry Doyle loses his war club;
Merkle keeps his fingers well greased;
The sun keeps out of John Titus' eyes;
Umpire Rigler's eyesight is O. K.;
Bill Sweeney counts ten before starting a fight.
Stallings has another "Hub" Perdue in his stable,
And,
"Cy" Seymour repeats——

IF all these things come to pass we will beat the Giants this afternoon. And we won't need any more hair-raising, sensational, spectacular, heart-disease, nerve-racking, wild, rampant, roaring finishes, either—like we had yesterday, only to lose, 3-2.

For the Boston Nationals would still lead the league with a clear, clean, unblemished record of two games won and none lost but for adverse incidents suggested above and with the aid of the favoring incidents contained in the list.

For instance (and this points a moral of "ifs" in baseball which are as likely to apply today as they did yesterday, and should therefore be carefully noted for future guidance); for instance, we say:

Christy Mathewson is still "Big Six"—the greatest pitcher, in a hole, in all baseball. In the second inning yesterday, the Pilgrims opened proceedings by cluttering up all the bases before a single soul had been dropped into the discard. John Titus was planted on third; Arthur Devlin had both feet glued to second, and "Hickory" Jackson was hovering around first. The trio were in their respective places by virtue of a base on balls and two generous errors contributed by Merkle. Now, what would you bet that, hitting or no hitting, nobody would score? You lose.

For, first comes Bill Rariden, slaps a bounder to Arthur Fletcher and Titus is gone, is gone at the plate for No. 1.

Then arises "Hub" Perdue, his trusty club in hand, strides to the plate and strikes out, one—two—three, just like that, on three pitched balls, for No. 2.

And, finally, and sadly we recount that Connelly, our new and rising young left-fielder, also does the Casey, just like "Hub" Perdue, except that he intersperses one foul ball among the three strikes, said foul being the sole extent of his superiority in the pinch over "Hub" Perdue, headliners and tailenders looking almost alike to "Matty" in the pinches. And there's No. 3.

How can you beat that?

Not a single, solitary run out of all that mess! Is "Matty" still a great pitcher? (Chorus) Yes, Matty still IS a great pitcher!

To demonstrate that this is only a sample, we remark in passing that for eight other innings not a Pilgrim passed second base, and only four of them hit safely in those eight innings, two of the four in the very first session. The remaining inning, which is unaccounted for in this paragraph, is reserved for comment some paragraphs later. (You want to read it, if you didn't see the game. It'll get you het up a bit about our ex-tailenders).

Passing on to the second IF: To wit, Larry Doyle's war club. Larry's ball team made five hits off "Hub" Perdue in nine innings, and one hit off Billy James in the tenth. Larry Doyle made four of the six. One of the remaining two was very, very scratchy—a sun fly that "Hickory" Jackson lost back of second base. Three of Larry's hits scored runs, proving our contention that IF Larry had lost his war club, McGraw would still miss the taste of a single victory and the Pilgrims would still be undefeated; yes, unscored upon.

With one out in the fourth, Doyle singled over second base and Murray singled, too, with the only clean safety that any Giant but Larry hit in the whole game. Then came that incident of Titus and the sun, mentioned in the collection of "IFS" enumerated above. Merkle lined squarely into Titus' hands. John did not have to move an inch. But just as the ball dropped it shot across the face of the sun. It hit Titus in the hands, fell to the ground and Doyle reached third. He scored on Herzog's sacrifice fly. You see, IF a cloud had passed over the sun, Titus would have held the ball, and Larry would never have gone to third; ergo, would never have scored, because Herzog's fly would have been the third out.

Doyle doubled in the sixth, but he never crossed the plate. So the next time up—in the eighth—he put a little more steam on and hoisted the ball over into Columbus avenue for the first home run of the season, and the second run in the Giants' collection.

His third entrance into this story occurred in the tenth chapter. With the score two all and James pitching for Perdue, Fletcher led off with a base on balls and Burns sacrificed him to second. As Doyle, next man up, was the only Giant who was hitting the ball, the obvious play here was to pass him. Instead James fed him one over the plate and Doyle pasted the pellet into the right field for his fourth straight hit, scoring Fletcher with the winning run.

It is time now to mention Rigler's eyesight, and Bill Sweeney's first performance as a "white hope" is inseparably connected with Rigler's attack of myopia.

Players objected now and then during the afternoon that Mr. Rigler was not always calling balls and strikes with strict accuracy. Players frequently do that, without justification, you know. But from the press stand it looked as if Mr. Rigler did "boot" one now and then—the Pilgrims being the principal alleged sufferers in the early stages. The crowd seemed to concur in this opinion, judging from the vociferous yowls that went up now and then.

But actual hostilities did not occur until Catcher Wilson was at bat in the fourth and "Red" Murray was lingering on third base waiting for somebody to help him home. Rigler threw a new white ball to Perdue, to replace one that had gone over the fence. Perdue knelt and rubbed it in the dirt. Rigler demanded the return of the ball, hurled it into the Pilgrims' bench, fined Perdue $5 and called for a new pellet. Perdue took the new one, pelted it to Sweeney and Rigler repeated his performance, fine included.

Sweeney had been getting warm beneath the collar all afternoon. This is Sweeney's first season as sole and omnipotent field captain and it is his business to raise a row, if occasion calls for for any demonstration on behalf of Boston. Sweeney considered this an occasion. He braced up to Rigler, argued that Mathewson had been soiling the balls uninterruptedly all afternoon and argued that the same right be granted to Perdue. Rigler shooed him away and tossed out a third white ball.

Perdue spat upon it, rubbed his glove in the dust, smeared the glove across the horsehide and then sent Wilson to first on four called balls.

Sweeney went to the bench at the end of the inning, figuratively foaming and boiling. He was seated but a moment when war broke loose again. "Hickory" Jackson hit a dribbler that bounded around the plate and rolled two feet into fair territory. [illegible] always do on such hits, but he pulled up within ten feet, accounting the ball foul, as such hits are almost invariably called.

But as Jackson started, Herzog and Mathewson set up a cry in unison:

"He hit it! He hit it!"

And Rigler promptly yelled:

"You're out!"

That settled it for Bill Sweeney. Striding towards the plate, he shouted, so you could hear him in Columbus avenue:

"I won't stand for THAT! Not on your life."

"Go and sit down," sang out Rigler.

"No, I'll not," responded Sweeney, approaching ten feet at a stride, "I'll not stand for it."

Then he stood before Rigler and, shaking his finger at the umpire, expressed his opinions with evident frankness.

"G'way from me," was all Rigler said. But he repeated the remark thrice. Sweeney continued arguing and gesticulating.

"Get off the field," ordered Rigler.

Sweeney Shoved Off the Field.

Still Sweeney argued. Then Rigler pulled his watch. Fifty-nine seconds after Sweeney left the park, one second ahead of a call for police assistance. It looked from the press stand as if Rigler were mistaken on this play—that the ball was foul. But Sweeney had no chance to gain anything by the argument. It appears, rather, that he lost. For with a man on second in the next inning, Smith—Sweeney's successor—struck out, whereas Sweeney is a corking batter and there was a chance, at least, that he would have hit more successfully.

Three more episodes made things uncomfortable for the umpire. While Burns was at bat in the fifth, a "fan" in the outfield bleachers held a mirror so as to direct the sun's rays into the batter's eyes. Burns complained. Rigler called a "cop," who carried the complaint to still another "cop," and the latter Paul Revered it to a third, and the third Sherlock Holmesed for the mirror. But the "fan" hid it. This amused the crowd.

In the seventh Perdue put a straight ball squarely across the plate for Snodgrass, and it looked the right height, but it was called a ball and Snodgrass later walked. This angered the "fans." In the tenth, "Matty" did likewise for Smith, with the same result. "Matty," who seldom complains, raised both hands above his head, shouted "Hooray," grinned, and the signal was repeated by half a dozen Giants. Whereupon "Matty" struck Smith out for revenge and ended the game.

But "Cy" Seymour and his bat! "Cy" nearly broke up the ball game in the ninth, when a quarter of the crowd had gone home. The score was 2 to 0 against us. Titus led off with a single. Devlin grounded to Merkle, who shot the ball away past Fletcher in an effort to catch Titus. Fletcher fell and Titus stumbled over him, or John would have reached third. Stallings hurried Calhoun out to run for Devlin, but "Mary" was wearing an old uniform and the umpires would not let him play. Gervais substituted for him. Then Seymour, the "vet," went up to pinch-hit for Rariden. He smashed the second ball pitched against the right field fence so hard that it bounded away back to centrefield. Titus and Gervais tumbled across the plate in a heap, tying the score. Seymour made two bases on the hit. McTigue went out to run for the veteran. Perdue flied out. Then Connelly singled to left. McTigue rushed home, in a desperate effort to draw a bad throw and win the game. But Murray's heave was squarely into Wilson's hands and we lost.

PHILADELPHIA, April 18.—With a grand average of only .200, with three straight gone to the Athletics and after having lost in a panic a game that seemed to be won, the Red Sox today were not the cocky bunch that cavorted around the diamond in the seventh yesterday when the score was 5 to 2 in their favor.

Truth is the world's champions were dejected. They had apparently placed yesterday's game on ice when they blew up in the eighth and gave it away as obviously as if they had quit before it started.

Boston's usually reliable ball team, victors over the Giants in the world's championship last Fall, went to pieces in the eighth and ninth innings of the opening game with the Athletics and the Mackmen won 6 to 5.

Boston blew up in the last two innings, while the Athletics, playing the hardest kind of an uphill game, grew more courageous as the game advanced. Thomas opened the ninth with a sharp grounder which Wagner could not quite get. Janvrin came in close in order to take the expected bunt by Bush.

The latter did what he was expected to do, but Janvrin failed to field the ball and when O'Brien picked it up there was no one on first to take the throw. Eddie Murphy rolled a bunt down the third base line which O'Brien fielded slowly and the bases were filled.

Carrigan could not agree with the infield where they should play and O'Brien went up in the air and failed to get a strike over on Oldring which forced Daley, who was running for Thomas, over with the winning run.

Boston got a splendid lead on the Athletics in the third inning, scoring five runs and driving "Chief" Bender to the bench. In this inning Ray Collins, who started on the bill for the Red Sox, was hit by a pitched ball. Hooper walked. Yerkes bunted safely, the Athletics infield being up in the air.

Speaker singled, scoring Collins and Hooper, advancing Yerkes to third and taking second himself on the throw in. Lewis singled, scoring Yerkes and Speaker. Danny Murphy, who was acting on the bench in place of Manager Mack, called Bender off and Bush went in to pitch. Gardner walked and Janvrin was thrown out at first by Barry.

Wagner grounded to McInnis, who threw Lewis out at the plate. Wagner stole second and on Thomas' wild throw Gardner scored. Carrigan fanned and the Sox looked good with their lead of four runs, the Athletics having scored one run in the second.

In the fourth, the Athletics scored their second run on Baker's single, a pass to McInnis and Barry's sacrifice fly. Collins was going good until the disastrous eighth, when he gave way to O'Brien, the Athletics tieing the score.

SIDELIGHTS ON SPORTS

By A. H. C. MITCHELL

McGRAW is carrying twenty-seven players. These include all of last year's National League champions (and near-world's champions) and several promising recruits. Among the latter is Jim Thorpe, the Indian athlete. Thorpe looks about as much like an Indian as Eddie Foy.

The club's president, H. N. Hempstead, son-in-law of the late John T. Brush, also made the trip to Boston to see the series with Stallings' crew. Also we have with us, ladies and gentlemen, Mr. and Mrs. Rube Marquard. Mrs. Marquard's stage name, it will be recalled, is Blossom Seeley. Red Sox batsmen well remember her husband.

THE business management of the team is in the hands of John B. Foster, long and favorably known as a newspaper writer. This is Mr. Foster's first trip with the Giants as the club secretary. He has a bad cold.

ARTHUR SHAFER, the little shortstop, did not come over with the team on the "World's Series Special." He is still suffering from that bump on the nose administered by Silent John Titus in the opening game of the season on the Polo Grounds, April 10. Silent John attempted to steal a base, and his chin collided with Arthur's nose, putting said nose and its owner out of business. Shafer is expected here today, and if he comes he will play shortstop this afternoon.

FIVE newspapermen are with the team—the veteran Sam Crane, of the New York Evening Journal; the celebrated Sid Mercer, of the Globe; the clever Damon Runyon, of the American; the versatile Harry Schumacker, of the Mail, and the young and energetic Hershel of the Evening Sun.

THE Giants and their camp followers are the most luxurious livers of any baseball delegation that comes to this town. Prima donnas and footlight favorites are envious. Nobody has breakfast much before 10 o'clock. McGraw himself refuses to get out of bed before noon. This is a rule with him Winter and Summer. The newspaper men dictate their stories in bed and send them to the telegraph office by messenger boys. The best time to see any of the New York crowd is between the hours of 11 p. m. and midnight.

EASY FOR DALEY.

SCRANTON, Pa., April 18.—Dan Daley of Newcastle knocked out Frank Bowers of Chicago in the third round of a scheduled six-round bout before the Nonpareil A. C. here.

Boxer Is Dead After Knockout Blow in Ring

HASTINGS, Mich., April 18.—Billy Allen, twenty-four, of Jackson, Mich., a lightweight pugilist is dead here today as the result of his bout last night with Tom Brady, also from Jackson. Allen received a terrific punch on the point of the jaw and fell backward, striking his head on the floor. Seconds and officials are being held pending an investigation.

MOAHONCAS START SEASON TOMORROW

The Moahoncas A. C. of Charlestown, will meet the fast Y. M. C. A. team at the Sullivan Square Playgrounds tomorrow. It will be the first game of the season for the Moahoncas, and Manager Meechan has his men especially groomed for this occasion. It is expected that Hamilton will pitch. Manager Meechan will be on the receiving end of the battery.

UNION REFUSES TO SUPPORT TY COBB

AUGUSTA, Ga., April 18.—A resolution condemning the methods of organized baseball as emphasized by Ty Cobb's case, was tabled by the Georgia Federation of Labor. The convention took the stand that Cobb's dispute with the Detroit club was not one in which organized labor was interested, as an effort has been made to unionize ball players and the players declined.

THORPE EAGER TO MAKE GOOD WITH GIANTS

By THOMAS J. HALPIN,

(Quarter-Mile Champion of the United States and Canada.)

When the New York Giants arrived in Boston with a squad of twenty-five men they had in their company a youth named Jim Thorpe, former world's amateur all-around champion athlete, but now playing baseball with New York.

Thorpe has changed a whole lot since his retirement from amateur athletics. In the first place he has grown bigger and is in perfect physical condition. He weighs nearly 190 pounds and certainly looks the athlete he is.

When asked his opinion about playing professional baseball, he replied that he always liked to play ball and that he considered himself very lucky in being connected with the New York team.

"I think McGraw is the finest fellow in the world, and although many people criticise him very harshly at times, if they could get into conversation with him they would change their opinion about him mighty quick. He is a cool, logical leader, and if a man does not agree with him on the spur of the moment 'Mac' will take him aside and have a quiet talk with him and that will settle all arguments, for it is impossible to hold out against him."

Thorpe has a great deal of confidence in the fact that he will make good as a ball player. It is almost impossible to get any of his views on the question of his own ideas about the game. He is of a retiring, modest disposition and his answers in most cases consist of only a few words.

He thinks that Ty Cobb in "holding out" will make himself very unpopular, although he added that most of the New York players agreed with Ty on the salary question.

Like a great many other natural athletes Thorpe is desirous of getting into the game. He wants to play ball for the sole pleasure he will get out of the game. He has had a great handicap to labor under, as most of the baseball "fans" throughout the country, although desiring to see him make good, feel that he will have to wait a number of years before he can show his true worth as a player.

Thorpe, on the other hand, is very ambitious. He wants to make a good showing this season. When asked about his standing with the other members of the team, he said:

"All of the boys have treated me fine. I think that we have a better set of fellows on the New York team than any other club in the league. There is never any argument among the men. I suppose this is due to the influence that McGraw's presence has on the men."

Right Off the Bat

By RILEY.

THIS is the tale of a shirt. When George Stallings was in need of a pinch-runner to supersede Devlin on first base in the ninth inning yesterday, his eye first fell on Calhoun, the recruit. He hurried Calhoun out on the base paths. There not being uniforms enough for Stallings' big squad of rookies, "Cal" was clad in a suit held over from last year.

"Nix," said Umpire Byron, one of the National's new arbitrators, and he ordered Calhoun back to the bench for appearing out of style. Pitcher Gervais was hastily substituted for him.

It happened that Cy Seymour doubled a moment later, scoring Titus and Gervais and tying the game. Pitcher McTigue was the only available man in a new uniform to run for Seymour. So the "Rebel" was hurried out to do sprinting duty.

But, with Smith already playing in Sweeney's place, this left not a man on the bench, wearing a new uniform, who could play third base. Stallings was not at a loss for a moment. While McTigue was trying in vain to score the winning run, Arthur Bues was out in the club house, tugging on the shirt that Bill Sweeney had discarded when he was bounced out of the game and the socks that "Hub" Perdue, eliminated for a pinch-hitter, had just removed.

Still wearing battle-worn trousers of last year's cut—which are the only part of the Pilgrims' old uniforms that conform with this year's—and a brand new shirt, stockings and cap, Bues trotted onto the field just as Fletcher went to bat in the tenth. Sweeney's shirt saved third base for the Pilgrims.

* * *

THE rules say:

> The suits of each of the uniforms of a team shall conform in color and style. No player who shall appear in a uniform not conforming to the suits of the other members of his team shall be permitted to take part in a game.

* * *

THE uniforms of the Pilgrims, and of the Giants, as well, are decidedly "futurist" in cut and color. The Pilgrims are arrayed in creamy white, with black stockings encircled by two streaks of the newest tint of red. A big Indian's head appears on the left arm, and a huge dark blue letter "B" on the left breast. Dark blue caps topped with tiny red buttons finish the costume, except—the mackinaw coats, cut Norfolk, which even Joseph in all his glory wore none like. A wild riot of red and blue and black plaid they are.

* * *

THE color scheme of the Giants' is mainly violet. A very lovely shade for ball players! The stockings are violet, with gray circlets at top and bottom. The suits are gray, with violet stripes. The gray caps have violet visors. The violet will be lavender soon, and the lavender will soon thereafter be gray—after a few washings. The Giants wear mackinaws of a gray plaid mixture. This baseball is going distinctly to golfian effects. The uniforms pleased the ladies immensely.

* * *

EVERY time you see Herzog play baseball you wonder what brain-storm upset the balance of the Boston magnates when Herzy played here. There is little doubt that right there is the greatest third sacker in the game at this writing. And the Boston Nationals practically gave him away. THAT'S why we are in last place. We let too many good ones go. We had first shot at Ray Keating, too—the boy who pitched the Sox into submission Tuesday—but last year's Pilgrim bosses passed him up. Frank Chance declares that Keating has the "makings" of the greatest in the game. THAT'S another reason why we're in last place. We've passed up too many good ones.

* * *

THE Giants and Pilgrims will move over to Fenway Park for the morning and afternoon Patriots' Day games tomorrow. If the two play a repetition of yesterday's game today, Stallings is likely to need the champions' park to hold his holiday crowds.

* * *

THIS from the San Francisco Examiner:

> John L. Sullivan, who will soon play at Pantages, announces that there is no basis for the report that he intends to try to come back; that if Pop McCarey offered a purse of $100,000 for a match between himself and Jim Jeffries or Jim Corbett the offer had been made without consulting either the X X X champions.
>
> Mr. Sullivan is quoted as also saying that he was about ready to forsake Art and leave the stage because the incubators on his chicken farm need his expert attention.

ARTHUR D. COOPER, the new secretary of the little old New England League, was the guest of honor at the dinner of the Winter League last night which was held in the rose garden of the Hotel Lenox. Cooper was presented with a brown traveling bag by the members of the club, which includes many of that gallant band of rooters who went to New York with the Red Sox last Fall. The presentation speech was made by John W. Campbell, the retiring president of the club. More than 150 prominent baseball men gathered around the festive board and they gave Cooper a grand ovation. We are sure that Arthur will make good in his new position.

COBB WANTS TIGERS TO RELEASE HIM

AUGUSTA, Ga., April 18.—Here is the "farewell" statement just issued by Ty Cobb, the hold-out Detroit outfielder:

"It seems I am a burden to the Detroit club, as a trespasser of its rules. If that be the case, let Mr. Navin put a price on me and I'll take a chance on being able to negotiate my own release.

"I don't think I shall ever play with Detroit again. This is positively my last statement in this matter."

WALSH OFFERED BOUT AT CALGARY

NEW YORK, April 18.—Freddie Welsh, lightweight champion of England, today was considering the offer of $2,500 made to him if he would go to Calgary, Alberta, and box fifteen rounds there with Pal Brown or Kid Scaler on May 24.

HAVRE DE GRACE RACE MEETING OPENED TODAY

HAVRE DE GRACE, Md., April 18.—August Belmont and Harry Payne Whitney were among the prominent owners whose stables were represented here today when the racing meet of the Hareford Agriculture and Breeders' Association opened. The meet is to last until May 1.

The enclosure here has been enlarged by several hundred feet, and accommodations for the general public have been vastly improved. An immense crowd turned out today, and everything has the aspect of a holiday. The announcement that racing was to be resumed in New York shortly gave an added impetus to the preparations for racing here. Among the prominent owners whose stables are represented are:

Beverwick Stable—R. F. Carman, G. P. Eustis, H. C. Hollenbeck, Robert Davies, HM. D. Bedwell, J. M. Zimmer, Fred Johnson, Mrs. L. A. Livingston, Tom Monahan, Captain E. B. Cassatt. Oneck Stable—James Fitzsimmons, P. S. P. Randolph, A. L. Aste, Ralph Parr, F. J. Pons, G. P. Sherman, Quincy Stables—J. O. Talbott, Amos Turney, R. T. Wilson, J. S. Tyree and many others.

Meredith Refuses to Meet Driscoll in Buffalo Race

Ted Meredith, the world's famous middle distance runner, will not race Driscoll in Buffalo Saturday night as scheduled. A meeting between these champions was arranged for the Sixty-fifth Regiment Armory games, which were to be held in that city Saturday night. There were to be two races, one over the 440 and the other over the 880-yard route.

Driscoll is the athlete who defeated Kiviat in a three-quarters of a mile race in Buffalo a few weeks ago, and who made a new world's indoor record for the distance. A week later he defeated Tait, the Canadian runner, over the mile route, covering the distance in 4m. 20 1-5s.

AMERICAN JOCKEY RIDES 4 WIINERS

LONDON, April 18.—Danny Maher, th American jockey, performed a remarkable feat at New Market. Maher had six engagements during the afternoon and rode four winners. Three of the winning mounts were piloted to the judges' stand in succession. One of them was the feature event, the Craven stakes, in which Maher handled Lord Rosebery's Sanquhar in characteristic style. In addition to this triumph Maher scored with Brand in the three-year-old Handicap Plate, also bringing home Highland Fowl in a selling race, and Lord Rosebery's Wrack in the Biennial stakes. Maher was loudly applauded on returning to weigh out.

Joe Eagan Defeats 'Young' M'Donough in Lawrence Bout

LAWRENCE, April 18.—Joe Eagan of South Boston defeated Young McDonough of Manchester, N. H., in the main event of twelve rounds at the Unity Cycle Club here. In the semi-final Terry O'Rourke of Lawrence defeated Rodie McDonald of Nova Scotia in eight rounds.

Eagan surprised the "fans" by his defeat of McDonough. He almost had the Manchester lad out in the second round, besides putting him down six times during the contest.

HARVARD BASEBALL TEAM PLAYS TIE

WASHINGTON, April 18. — Harvard and Georgetown played twelve fast innings to a 4 to 4 tie here, the game being called by agreement to let the visitors catch a train. Felton, for Harvard, struck out fourteen men and allowed only six hits.

SPECIAL SALE
London-Shrunk Serges
4000 Yards; Blues, Blacks, Greys
ONE WEEK ONLY

Get a serge suit this week selected from this special sale of London-shrunk serges; you'll have suit comfort all Summer long. Included in this sale is famous Shamrock Serge No. 6019, as well as many others worth from $3 to $4 per yard, and all guaranteed not to shine or shrink. Made to measure, one week only, $14.75.

Every yard of cloth that is sold at our stores is guaranteed London-shrunk before it is placed on sale. A London-shrunk serge or worsted shrinks from 2 to 4 inches on every 54-inch bolt of material—and after being put through this soaking in cold water process it can shrink no more. It costs us more money to re-shrink every yard we buy, but it pays us in the long run, for this forethought on our part makes thousands of satisfied customers for us in the future. Remember that 5th avenue tailors use this same process—but they charge $75 to $100 for suits in no way better than a Ritchie & Cornell suit at $14.75.

When you purchase a R. & C. suit that has been London shrunk you need have no fear of a sudden shower or even a downpour, for the suits cannot shine, shrink, bind or twist in any way; furthermore, our garments are completely finished as to linings and detail, thus insuring to the suit long life and lasting wear.

The House on the Marsh

A CELEBRATED NOVEL BY FLORENCE WARDEN

PART II.

As the detective pronounced the name "James Woodfall," I gave a cry, which startled them all. Shaken as my trust in Mr. Rayner had already been, the shock seemed in a moment to change the aspect of the whole world to me. I shrank even from Laurence, as he would have put his arms round me, and my wild wandering eyes fell upon Mrs. Rayner, who sat with her hands tightly clasped, head bent, listening to the proclamation of the secret which had weighed her down for years. And, as I looked at her, the scales seemed to fall from my eyes, and my dull wits to become keener and part of the Mystery of the House on the Marsh to grow clear to me.

I sank down upon the floor beside her, and she put her thin, wasted arms round my neck and kissed me without a word. The three men quietly left the room. We did not say much even then.

"Oh, Mrs. Rayner," I whispered, "it is terrible for you!"

"Not so terrible to me," she whispered back, wearily. "I had known it for years—almost ever since I married him, but don't talk about it any more," said she, glancing furtively round the room. "He may be in the house at this moment, and they might search and watch for months, but they would never catch him. But he will make us suffer—me—ah, and you too, now. You were so unsuspicious, yet it must have been you who set Laurence Reade upon the track."

"Not of Mr. Rayner. Oh, I never thought of such a thing," I whispered, shuddering.

Explains Her Suspicions

And I told her all about my suspicions of Tom Parks, my visit to the Hall, my letter to Laurence, and all I said in it.

"Mr. Reade has shown energy and courage," said she. "But he will suffer for it, too. You don't know that man yet. He will never let Laurence marry you. Even if he were in prison he would manage to prevent it.

Luckily Laurence himself tapped at the door at that moment, for Mrs. Raymond's gloomy forebodings were fast increasing the fever of my overwrought mind. He came to say that the constables had returned to the house, having failed in the fog to find any traces of Gordon, or of—of any of the others.

He was going to return with them to the Hall, where they would sleep, even Maynard to pass the night at the Alders, as his missing host had invited him to do, and a couple of constables to keep watch in turn, though there was nothing less likely than that the—the persons they were in search of would return to the Alders that night. Then he said very gently to poor Mrs. Rayner:

"Will you forgive me for what I have done in all innocence? I had some vague suspicions, the reasons for which I will explain to you presently, but indeed I never thought to bring such a blow as this upon you."

"It is no blow to me," said she, raising her sad eyes to my face. "That man—my husband—would have got rid of me long ago but that he hated violence and dreaded it. Everything short of that he has tried," she whispered, "and it is not my fault that my wretched life has lingered on in spite of him."

Laurence ground his teeth.

"The wretch!" he said, in a low voice. "But he shall pay for it now. I'll ransack the whole world till we have unearthed him."

"You will never do that," said she, calmly. 'He dares too much for that. He is no coward to lie hid in the corner," she went on with a sort of perverse pride for the man for whom every spark of love had long since died away.

"He will brave you to your faces and escape you all. But you have done your best. You are a brave man, Mr. Reade, and I know you would help me if you could. Good night."

She shook hands with him and left the room. He turned to me quickly.

Urges Both to Leave.

"You must both leave this place," said he. "The long-continued strain has almost turned that poor lady's brain. But she is safe from that vile wretch now, and you, oh, my darling, thank Heaven."

There was a tap at the door and a voice of the elder detective said: "Are you ready, sir?"

"All right," said Laurence, and then added, in a voice for me only. "I'm not ready a bit. I should like to stay and comfort you forever. Take care of your poor little wounded arm. Good-night, my darling."

I heard him leave the house with the constables; then, exhausted by the events of the day and night, I just managed to crawl upstairs to my room, and, throwing myself upon the bed without undressing, I fell into a deep sleep which was more like a swoon. In the early morning I awoke, feeling stiff and ill, undressed and got into bed, and when the sun had risen I got up with hot and aching head and found my arm was beginning to be very painful.

Laurence told me in one of the little notes he kept leaving for me all day long that it was expected that Mr. Rayner would brave everything and return to the Alders sooner or later, if only for a flying visit, and that in consequence the search of the house which must take place was to be postponed and the police would watch with as much caution as possible from the outside.

By letting the light at the Alders go on as usual it was hoped that he might be lured back under the impression that he was not expected to return there. Laurence had telegraphed to my mother that I was quite safe and the journey put off in order to allay her fears about me.

Mrs. Rayner brought one of these notes up to me late in the afternoon. In addition to her usual pallor, she had great black rings around her eyes, and in answer to my questions she confessed that she had not slept all night.

"I have something to tell you," she whispered in my ear. "Mrs. Saunders drinks and is not a proper guardian for Sarah. She is afraid of Mr. Rayner, but last night, knowing he was not in the house, she was in nearly as excited a state as her patient, and was very rough with her. And I opened my door and heard what sounded like a struggle. Maynard, who was in the room next to the dressing-room, either did not hear or did not like to interfere. But now he is gone, and I ought to be used to terrors, but I am afraid," and she shuddered.

"Surely there is nothing to be afraid of if you lock your door, Mrs. Rayner?"

"I have no key. Will you leave your door open and the door at the foot of the turret staircase? I know you must not leave your bed, but it will be some comfort to know you are within hearing."

I promised, and that night, when Jane came up to my room for the last time, I made her leave the doors open when she went down.

Discovers Prowler

The sense of being on the alert made me wakeful, and two or three times during the night I rose and stood at the top of the staircase listening. And the third time I did hear something. I heard a faint cry, and presently the soft shutting of a door, then steps in the corridor below, and whisperings. I crept half-way down the stairs. The whispering continued. I got to the bottom and recognized Sarah's voice muttering to herself.

I would rather have again faced Gordon with his revolver than this mad woman, but I was so anxious about Mrs. Rayner that, after a few minutes spent in prayer, I ventured out from the doorway, and found Sarah crouched in a corner muttering to herself. The wretched woman started upon seeing me, but, instead of attempting to approach me, she hung back, moving her still bandaged head and her one free arm restlessly, and saying:

"I've done it!—I've done it! He'll come back now. I've done what he wanted. He can marry the Christie girl now. It's all right. He'll come back again now."

With a terrible fear at my heart I dashed along the corridor to Mrs. Rayner's room and went straight in. The atmosphere of the room was sickly and stifling. I went up to the bed. Mrs. Rayner was lying with a cloth over her face! I snatched it off. It was steeped in something which I afterwards learned was chloroform. Thank Heaven, she was alive! For she was breathing heavily. I rushed to the two windows and flung them wide open, pulled the bell-rope until the house echoed, and moved her arms up and down. The cook and Jane came in terribly alarmed, in their nightgowns. I left them with Mrs. Rayner, while I ran downstairs for some brandy.

There was some on the sideboard in the dining room, I knew, and I was returning with it. I was just outside the dining room door when I caught sight of a man in the gloom at the end of the passage leading from the hall. He had come from Mr Rayner's study, and disappeared in a moment in the darkness. It was impossible to recognize him, but I could not doubt that it was Mr. Rayner.

Where was he going? Was he going to escape by the back way? Did he know the house was watched? I made a step forward, anxious to warn him, but he had already disappeared, and I dared not follow him.

Stayed With Mrs. Rayner

I crept upstairs, too much agitated to be of use any longer; but happily Mrs. Rayner was already recovering, and the brandy and water restored her entirely to consciousness. I spent the rest of the night in her room, after I had, with the cook's assistance, persuaded the unhappy woman who had done the mischief to return to her room, where we found, as I had expected, Mrs. Saunders in a stupid, heavy sleep, half in her armchair and half on the floor. The cook declined to watch in place of her for the rest of the night, but as a precaution locked the door on the outside and took the key away.

"Now if Sarah wants to do any more mischief let her try it on Mrs. Saunders," said she.

I could scarcely approve of this way of settling the difficulty, but happily no harm came of it and Mrs. Saunders profited by the lesson and kept pretty sober after that.

This woman, having been sent from town by Mr. Rayner, had taken upon herself in some sort the authority formerly held by Sarah in the household, and she now suggested that Mrs. Rayner had better go back to her old room in the left wing, saying she would take care of it for her as Sarah had done. The poor lady came up herself to my room, where, having made my arm much worse by my expedition in the night, I was lying in bed the whole of the next day.

"Why do you go back there if you don't wish to do so?" I asked.

"I expect it is Mr. Rayner's orders," she whispered.

And my strong suspicion that he was in the house, acting like a spell upon me, I said no more.

But I was curious to know what was the mystery that hung about the bedroom in the left wing, which no one was allowed to enter but Mrs. Rayner and Sarah, and I resolved that as soon as I could I would try and induce Mrs. Rayner to let me go in there.

To Be Continued Tomorrow.

FRECKLE-FACE

Sun and Wind Bring Out Ugly Spots; How to Remove Easily.

Here's a chance, Miss Freckle-Face, to try a new remedy for freckles, with the guarantee of a reliable dealer that it will not cost you a penny unless it removes the freckles; while if it does give you a clear complexion the expense is trifling.

Simply get an ounce of othine—double strength—from any of the Riker-Jaynes drug stores and a few applications should show you how easy it is to rid yourself of the homely freckles and get a beautiful complexion. Rarely is more than one ounce needed for the worst case.

Be sure to ask the druggist for the double strength othine, as this is the prescription sold under guarantee of money back if it fails to remove freckles.

What Is Good to Eat in the Market

No less than thirty varieties of fresh fish are offered for sale in Boston markets today and most of them are selling for prices within the reach of everyone. All kinds of fish sell for prices under those that have prevailed during the late Winter and early Spring.

Lobsters, which were selling for sixty cents a pound at wholesale a few weeks ago, are now selling for twenty-five cents a pound at retail, for both live and boiled, and chicken live lobsters sell for twenty cents a pound. Boiled chicken lobsters bring fifteen cents each.

A few fresh mackerel are coming up from the South, but as yet they are very scarce and sell for seventy-five cents each. Spanish mackerel sell for thirty-five cents a pound.

A few Penobscot salmon are coming into the market, but they still sell for high prices, averaging about $1 a pound. Royal chinook salmon from the Pacific sell for forty-five cents a pound.

Other prices quoted are as follows: Cod eight cents, haddock eight cents, halibut eighteen cents, chicken halibut twenty-two cents, flounders ten cents, eels twenty cents, bluefish seventeen cents, cod cheeks and tongues fifteen cents, New Orleans pompano forty cents, sea trout twenty-five cents, brook trout seventy-five cents, salmon trout twenty-five cents, horn pout seventeen cents, lake trout twenty-five cents, striped bass thirty-five cents, white perch twenty-five cents, butter fish twenty-five cents, lake white fish twenty-five cents, roe shad twenty cents, jack shad seventeen cents, shad roes fifty cents a pair, alewives four cents each, sole twenty cents, turbot twenty cents. Salt and cured fish: Kippered herring four to six cents, smoked salmon thirty-five cents, smoked halibut twenty-five cents, finnan haddies, ten to twelve cents, salt mackerel fifteen to twenty cents, other salt fish twelve to twenty cents. Shell fish: Providence River oysters forty cents, Norfolk oysters thirty-five cents, clams thirty cents, little necks twenty cents a peck, quohaugs seventy-five cents a peck, cape oysters $1 a peck, soft shell crabs $1.25 per dozen.

Southern asparagus is coming into the Boston markets in increasing quantities and the price has been cut in two during the past fortnight. Splendid bunches of Carolina asparagus now sell for thirty cents each. Other green vegetables are also plentiful and cheap.

Strawberries are more plentiful and better in quality. Excellent berries now sell for thirty cents a box.

CURED TERRIBLE HUMOR ON FACE

Could Not Go On Street Without Veil—Tells What Resinol Did For Her.

Philadelphia, Dec. 6, 1912.—"In December, 1908, my face became sore. I tried everything that was recommended, and my face got worse instead of better. I spent over $100 and got no benefit. The face and nose were very red and the eruption had the appearance of small boils, which itched me terribly. I cannot tell you how terrible my face looked—all I can say is, it was dreadful, and I suffered beyond description.

"I have not gone on the street any time since 1908 without a veil, until now. Just four months ago a friend persuaded me to give Resinol a trial. I have used three cakes of Resinol Soap and less than a jar of Resinol Ointment, and my face is perfectly free from any eruption, and my skin is as clear and clean as any child's. It is about four weeks since the last pimple disappeared." (Signed) Mrs. M. J. Bateman, 4256 Viola St.

Nothing we can say of Resinol equals what others, such as Mrs. Bateman, say of it. If you are suffering from itching, burning skin troubles, pimples, blackheads, dandruff, ulcers, boils, stubborn sores, or piles, it will cost you nothing to try Resinol Ointment and Resinol Soap. Just send to Resinol, Baltimore, Md., for a free sample of each. Every druggist sells Resinol.

Cassidy Today Gives Names of Friends and Foes of Pure Food Fight

Mr. Cassidy today shows how many of the State health inspectors and the city health inspectors have taken an indifferent or hostile attitude toward the food bills introduced into the Legislature, and how two or three inspectors, in contrast, have fought the fight for pure food.

By HARRY P. CASSIDY.

The food fight in the Legislature is at its height, and no final verdict on the food inspectors and their attitude toward food bills can be given, but I wish today to give two or three of the inspectors their due.

On the side of food purity, there is an honor roll headed by these names:

JOSEPH L. JOHNSON, Cambridge's food inspector.

JAMES O. JORDAN, Boston's milk inspector.

On the other hand, as an active worker against some bills, and as a passive force against progressive food legislation.

DR. ALEXANDER BURR, Boston food inspector.

In this list I have not included the names of half a dozen milk inspectors who have fought hard for milk legislation. George E. Bolling of Brockton has led this fight, and has been seconded by others.

Joseph L. Johnson of Cambridge has been the most progressive worker among the food inspectors this year. He introduced a bill aimed at the greatest evil in the present Massachusetts law. His bill strikes the word "knowingly" out of the law dealing with the sale of unwholesome food. It is exactly parallel to a bill bearing my name, and one of the two identical bills will be reported, I am told, by the Committee on Public Health, with a recommendation that it be passed.

Advocates Many Bills.

This has been the least of Inspector Johnson's works. In addition to introducing this bill, he has appeared at the committee hearings and has advocated other bills. He advocated, for instance, the bill forbidding the use of cereal in sausage. The use of cereal is a cheat, and I introduced a bill to forbid it. Inspector Johnson appeared to argue for the bill, and told the committee some of his own experiences.

Inspector Johnson also appeared to support other bills in had introduced, striking the word "knowingly" out of other passages in the law He has not only fought the fight at the hearings on these bills, but he has appeared at the State House to talk the measures over informally with members of the committee, and has brought these facts before the Cambridge Representatives and Senators, with the result that most of these men are fighting for food purity in the House.

The people of Cambridge have a right to be proud of Inspector Johnson, and I believe they are proud of him. If every food inspector were of his type, the Massachusetts food market would speedily be cleaned up. And the most significant feature of Inspector Johnson's work is that his position is supported by the sentiment of fair minded fruit, vegetable and provision dealers, who have declared themselves at hearings at the State House.

Awaits Foss Signature.

James O. Jordan, Boston Milk Inspector, introduced two bills, both excellent. One was to forbid the sale of cheese made of skim milk unless the purchaser was notified that the cheese was so made. This bill was referred to the next General Court by the Committee on Agriculture.

Inspector Jordan also introduced the bill forbidding the sale of butter containing more than 16 per cent of water. He appeared to argue for the bill, and brought Joseph J. Corbett, corporation counsel for the city, to suport his arguments.

The bill was favorably reported, passed the House without debate, passed the Senate likewise to the final stage, was defeated by a Republican trick engineered by President Levi H. Greenwood of the Senate and Senator Walter E. McLane of Fall River, but was reconsidered and passed through the efforts of Senators Fisher, Horgan, Ward, McCarthy, Clark and others.

This bill is now awaiting the Governor's signature, when it will become law.

Dr. Alexander Burr, on the other hand, has been a force against some of the bills before the Legislature. He planned to fight the rotten egg bill, designed to eradicate the disgusting traffic in decomposed eggs for use by bakers in cakes and pies. This bill was opposed by Alton E. Briggs and by Professor W. T. Sedgwick, but Dr. Burr—he is a horse doctor—not an M. D.—did not speak against it.

Dr. Burr fathered the iniquitous bill to ense rotten egg dealers and others engaged in noxious trades. This bill was opposed by Junius T. Auerbach for the AMERICAN, on the ground that it simply protected the rotten egg dealer in his traffic, and the Committee on Public Health reported unfavorably on the bill, with the result that it was defeated.

Dr. Burr has appeared at the State House several times, and has been seen in conference with Mr. Briggs, the arch-opponent of all pure food legislation, and with Senators who have fought to kill food bills. He—Dr. Burr—also took the position, in an interview with my assistant, that my charges against four Boston egg dealers had been unjust, and that a "spot" egg—partly decomposed—was fit for food. The indictment of the egg firms I accused is a partial vindication of my position, and shows Dr. Burr's position in food matters.

SOBER BUT PAWKY

The temperance reformer was justly proud of having converted the biggest drunkard in a little Scotch town, and induced him—he was the local gravedigger—to get on the platform and spout his experiences.

"My friends," he said, "I never, never thocht to stand up on this platform with the provost on one side o' me and the toon clerk on the ither side o' me. I never thocht to tell ye that for a whole month I haven't touched a drap of anything. I've saved enough to buy me a braw oak coffin wi' brass handles and brass nails—and if I'm a teetotaler for anither month I shall be wantin' it."

His Landlady's Advice Probably Saved His Life

I feel that Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root saved my life. I inherited weak kidneys. The discharge was so frequent and painful that I would have to stay in bed to obtain temporary relief. I consulted good physicians, but the results were disappointing. My landlady advised me to try Swamp-Root as the last resort, which I did, and I was quickly relieved.

I continued taking Swamp-Root, and my weight has increased fifty pounds. My health is of the best, and I have told many others about Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root and have done a lot of good in this way. Your wonderful medicine is of great value to mankind.

Yours very truly,
J. H. BRUXBY,
835 Main St. Pawtucket, R. I.

The above statement made before me I declare to be truthful in every detail.

Society Happenings Tomorrow

Annual meeting Massachusetts Sons of the American Revolution, American House, 10:30 a. m.

Charlotte Club dinner, American House, 12:30 p. m.

Daughters of the Revolution banquet, Vendome, 2 p. m.

Charity Horse Show, Park Riding Club, afternoon.

Sons of St. George banquet, Quincy House, 7:30 p. m.

Sawyer-Winslow wedding, Leicester, 7:30 p. m.

Knights of Columbus dinner to Cardinal O'Connell, Copley-Plaza, evening.

Tomorrow, Patriots' Day, has been chosen by a number of prospective Boston brides as their wedding date. Miss Gertrude C. Wilcox, Wellesley, 1911, and Maurice P. Anderson of Seattle, Washington, Technology, 1910, will be married Saturday at the home of the bride's mother, Mrs. Winifred Lewando, No. 217 Newbury street, Back Bay. The Rev. John Hale Reed of Belmont will perform the ceremony.

Miss Olive L. Huston, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles B. Huston of Quincy, will be married to Joseph G. Jacobs of the same city at the home of her parents on Revere road, Quincy, tomorrow evening.

Miss Dorothy Winslow, daughter of Congressman and Mrs. Samuel Ellsworth Winslow, and William Henry Sawyer, Jr., are to be married at the country place of the Winslows in Leicester at 7:30 o'clock tomorrow evening. A number of Boston friends will be present at the reception following the ceremony.

Miss Julia Newbold, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Newbold, of New York, a niece of the late Mrs. Frederic R. Sears of Boston, will be married at the home of her parents tomorrow, the Rev. Endicott Peabody officiating. Owing to the recent death of Mrs. Sears, the wedding will be very quiet.

One of tomorrow's big events will be the banquet at the Copley-Plaza, when Knights of Columbus will gather from all sections of the Commonwealth to honor Cardinal O'Connell. Lieutenant-Governor David I. Walsh of Massachusetts, and Lieutenant-Governor Martin H. Glynn of New York are to be among the guests.

The Sons of the American Revolution will have a banquet at 1 o'clock in the American House tomorrow afternoon. At 2 o'clock the Daughters of the Revolution, with the Junior Sons and Daughters, have a dance and dinner at the Vendome. Mrs. Mary A. J. Jackson is in charge of the arrangements for the latter event.

In Mechanics Hall tomorrow takes place the annual festival of St. Mary's Infant Asylum. The various churches of the archdiocese will be represented by tables. The first donors were Mrs. Woodrow Wilson, who sent a hand-embroidered handkerchief, and Mrs. William Howard Taft, who gave a painting of the White House and adjacent grounds.

The charity horse show, with many society patronesses, will be held tomorrow afternoon at the Park Riding School for the benefit of flood sufferers.

United States Tires are offsetting the high cost of gasoline

Never before in the history of motoring have motorists received as much mileage from their tires as they are getting today from United States Tires. The average mileage yielded by these tires has been raised to a point from 25 to 50 per cent. above that ever reached by any tire maker previous to the organization of the United States Tire Company. Motorists will be actually able to operate their cars for less money this year than they have ever been able to do before—this in spite of the continued rise in the price of gasoline.

You will be forced to pay a fifty per cent. increase in the price of your fuel, but you can save more than this on your tire mileage.

This is the most important service that has ever been rendered to motorists by any tire maker. It will mean a saving of from forty to eighty dollars to every United States Tire user.

But bear this in mind—you can't get this big reduction in tire expense — you can't offset the high cost of gasoline, without using UNITED STATES TIRES.

The best dealers in every community handle them.

Made in Plain, Chain and Nobby Treads, and in three styles of fastening, including the famous Dunlop (Straight Side) Tire.

Cost no more than you are asked to pay for other kinds

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

PROBABLY NEITHER.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am a young woman of sixteen and am deeply in love with a young man, with whom I have been keeping steady company for the past nine months. Having asked me not to go with any other man I have been true to him.

While at a social the other evening his attentions withdrew from me toward another young woman, of whom I think a great deal. Do you think this was done to hurt my feelings or to test my love for him? He escorted me home and treated me as usual.

BROKEN-HEARTED.

IT is more probable that the other girl interested him for a moment and he forgot you. You are only sixteen, too young to give a promise of any kind to a man. Please do not take this affair so seriously and please see less of him.

DECIDEDLY NOT.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am twenty, and recently met a pretty blonde. I assume she is about nineteen years old.

Whenever I see her she gives me a pleasant smile.

Would it be proper for me to approach her and thereby introduce myself?

RAYMOND.

SUCH a procedure would be treating her with disrespect. You must wait for an introduction.

Little Blind Boy and the Sun

By WILLIAM F. KIRK

"YOU must be a wonderful wonderful Sun,"
Said the Little Blind Boy one day;
"My father told me you were easy to see
"Till the stars come to twinkle and play.
I wish I could know how you look when glow
Just after the day has begun;
Do you think I'll be bigger than you when I grow?"
Said the Little Blind Boy to the Sun.

"You must be a beautiful, beautiful child."
Said the Sun through its dazzling glare;
"But I am blind, too, and I cannot see you
Although I am sure you are there.
Don't cry, little lad, and don't try, little lad,
To grasp unattainable joy;
Perhaps we'll be peers after billions of years,"
Said the Sun to the Little Blind Boy.

"WHEN I WAS ONE AND TWENTY"

By Lawrence Housman.

When I was one and twenty I heard a wise man say:
"Give crowns and pounds and guineas, but not your heart away;
Give pearls away and rubies, but keep your fancy free."
But I was one and twenty—no use to talk to me!
When I was two and twenty, I heard him say again:
"The heart from out the bosom was never given in vain;
'Tis bought with sighs aplenty, and sold for endless rue."
And I am two and twenty—and, oh! 'tis true—'tis true.

The Invasion of Literary Culture

"LITERARY culture has invaded our otherwise peaceful suburb," said the veterinary surgeon. "Where it comes from is a matter of speculation. It is believed that some woman's magazine is responsible, and the postmaster says that such things should be quarantined.

"Anyway the craze got started. Some one suggested that our suburb should have a literary society like other important centres. The section foreman's wife is supposed to have been the prime mover. The storekeeper's wife, being a social leader, naturally followed. The postmaster's wife took down with it next and then the vegetable gardener's wife was hit hard.

"They hired a teacher just as the swell ladies do in the cities, and the teacher was glad to get the money, just as teachers are apt to be.

"Shakespeare was first taken up. The section foreman's wife was selected by the teacher to investigate the early life of the immortal bard. Ten minutes was allotted to her paper. She achieved a triumph, for she completed what she had to say in two minutes.

"The plays of Shakespeare were covered by the truck gardener's wife in half a minute, and hers was the triumph of the evening, for everybody was in a hurry to begin the eating.

"Oh, yes, the literary society of our suburb is a success in every way."

Letters to Girls

By ELLA WHEELER WILCOX

Number One

To a Little Girl:

Yesterday I visited at your home, and I feel I must write to you, instead of to your mother, for it was you who gave me the greatest pleasure I derived from a very pleasant visit.

Your conduct while I was under your parents' roof was so commendable that it would be a sin of omission were I to keep silent and not tell you how it affected me.

You are only a dozen years old, but in that dozen you have absorbed charming and beautiful qualities, and acquired habits which will sweeten all your future years, and bless the lives of many others, if you retain them.

First of all, I noticed your low, soft voice, and your pretty way of courtesying, and the way you had of looking directly at me while you gave your hand in greeting to your mother's guest.

Then I observed how quickly and quietly you responded to any word from your elders—running on errands and waiting on your mother and her guest with such a sweet air, as if it were play to you, and never seeming to be conscious of yourself, only of those who were about you.

I noticed your way of saying "Thank you" and "You are very kind" when your parents and older sister bestowed any favor on you; and I saw how you tried to be unobtrusive when older people were talking and to avoid breaking into conversations or slamming doors or making any undue noise.

Then, too, your attitudes pleased me. At your age, it is hard to think about deportment; yet your mother evidently trained you when you were small so that it is now second nature for you to sit, and stand, and walk correctly.

While you were easy and natural and not at all stiff or formal, you kept your feet close together on the floor, or on a footstool, when sitting. You did not sink your chest or round your shoulders; and you were not continually leaning on your elbows.

You listened with remarkable concentration and quiet interest when you were in the room where older people were talking.

When they talked to you it was delightful to see your interested manner, keeping your eyes on the speaker and giving little words of understanding now and then.

At other times I watched you playing with children, both in and out of door, and saw that you were full of young animal spirits, and as buoyant and natural as any other child, and sometimes a bit boistrous and over-exuberant.

That is quite excusable, and once when a little boy was rude I saw you indulge in a temper and heard you order him home. So I realized you were quite a human child, and not an angel. But it was your treatment of older people which delighted me. Your way of noticing what others needed and offering your services means so much in this life.

We are here to be helpful to one another. Like the Great Master, we should each one feel "I came to minister, not to be ministered unto."

I saw you, while reading a book, glance up and note your mother looking for her scissors, and you ran and gave them to her; and a moment later you asked your father if he had a match as he was about to light his after-dinner cigar. Then you asked me if I was warm enough, and if I would like a scarf; and all this was done naturally and spontaneously; and I knew it was second nature to you.

Keep it all, dear child, as you grow older; for it will give great happiness as you pass along the road of life, and it will, in turn, bring you great happiness.

Happiness comes from the little things of life, not from one or two great special events. You scattered happiness seeds almost every hour of my visit; and when I spoke to your mother about it she said you were always like that.

So I know a big harvest of happiness is growing for you to reap in years to come.

"KID" CARTER KNOWN AS "BAD MAN" TO POLICE

If the jury had found Jennings not guilty, the inspector from Malden would have arrested Jennings at once for the murder of Mildred Donovan."

Frank A. Menard of Revere, stepfather of Mildred Donovan, said today that he would personally ask District Attorney Higgins to send his stepdaughter's murderer to the electric chair.

Jennings' confession that he murdered Mildred Donovan has roused Mr. Menard to bitter demand for vengeance. He said:

"Carter ought to go to the electric chair. I would like to be present and see him electrocuted. His admission substantiates the theory of myself and of Mildred's mother.

"Now that the truth has come out and Carter has admitted killing Mildred, I will call on District Attorney Higgins and ask that Carter be prosecuted for killing her."

Parents Cry for Vengeance.

Jennings' confession, in which he admits at least one other murder beside those of Mrs. Donovan and of William H. MacPherson, in addition to lesser crimes, only confirms the belief which Mr. and Mrs. Menard had held from the first.

Jennings' acknowledgement, however, makes the parents free to voice their feelings and to demand Jennings' life in punishment for the murder of their daughter.

The grief-stricken father says:

> I have had no doubt for months that Mildred was murdered by Jennings.
>
> I am confident that District Attorney Higgins will see that justice is done my daughter. I want Jennings to pay the penalty for the murder of my daughter.

The grief-stricken mother, with tears streaming down her cheeks, called Jennings "A black-hearted villain."

That their "Mildred" should be murdered—slowly strangled to death by the very man she was trying to help and to reform, makes the parents' cry for vengeance all the more bitter.

Jennings himself is spending today in "solitary" in Charlestown State Prison. This is the regular provision of a life sentence. Tomorrow he will be put to hard labor.

Regarded as "Bad Man."

The prison guards will watch Jennings vigilantly. He is regarded as a "bad" one in the worst sense of the word. He gained the reputation as a tough prisoner at Charles Street Jail. He cursed incessantly, insulted Dr. Cilley, the jail physician, threw broken glass at the eyes of one of his guards and generally conducted himself as a dangerous, desperate youth.

He may try these tactics at Charlestown, but he will get short shrift if he does. While the State Prison is run in a humane manner, there is not the slightest chance of Jennings being allowed to break up prison discipline or anything like that.

That Jennings expects to stand the most radical consequences of his confession is indicated by one brief statement he made just before he was taken over to Charlestown. He said:

"You won't hear any kick coming from me. I'll take anything they give me, even the chair if it comes."

Jennings' first statement in court, wherein he admitted the murder of Mildred Donovan, made court spectators gasp.

But his more detailed statement, made to an AMERICAN reporter while waiting in the detention pen, was a veritable catalogue of crime.

Told How His Victim Died.

The most dreadful part of the confession reeled off by the glib-tongued young murderer was where he told how Mildred Donovan died. Here is his description of the Donovan girl's death, told in three dozen words:

"Mildred Donovan died by my hand. Look at my thumb. See where this nail is broken. That happened in the struggle. But she died easy. It took eighteen minutes. She died at 7:55."

Jennings admitted having been arrested forty times.

He made the old plea of the ill-doer, that he "never had a chance." He had the stock complaint of the law-breaker, that the police hounded him.

"The Chelsea cops used me bad. They beat me up when I was a youngster," he growled.

In this connection it is interesting to note that the Chelsea police, in a terse review of Jennings' character, as they found him through his boyhood, sum him up as a persistently bad boy, a tough youth and a persistent lawbreaker, despite the influence of a good home and good parents.

Whether Jennings ever "had a chance" or not, he committed two murders, on his own confession, took part in another murder, for which his partner was sent to prison, and committed numerous other acts of crime and violence.

Here is a list compiled from his confession:

Took part in a murder in Michigan in 1910, for which his partner, Bert Smith, received a second degree murder.

Had a hand in "several" other murders in the West.

Beat up Edward Case in Everett so badly that the victim is now in an insane asylum.

"Stuck up" an old man named Hill last year in Everett.

Murdered Mrs. Mildred Donovan because he thought she meant to "squeal" on him about the Hill hold-up. He strangled Mrs. Donovan on New Year's Eve.

Fresh from the Donovan killing, he went over to Boston and murdered William H. MacPherson by shooting him in a South End saloon on New Year's Day.

Jennings made it clear that he killed Mrs. Donovan for fear she would "squeal" on him for his connection with the Everett robbery.

"I intended to kill her in cold blood," he said, "and went to Malden for that express purpose."

Hunted for Everett Hold-up.

The Everett robbery which Jennings admits he committed occurred about four years ago. William Case was crossing the hill above Glendale Park some time after midnight when he was attacked by two young men and robbed of his valuables. He was confined to a hospital several weeks. His description of the men caused suspicion to be directed toward Jennings, who disappeared. Search for him was fruitless. The confederate of Jennings, named Kimball, was said to have been killed by a train later. Jennings had remained away until his recent return from the West.

John A. Donovan, husband of the murdered Mildred Donovan, is prostrated today at the awful confirmation of what he had suspected right along.

Mr. Donovan is a clerk in the receiving department of the Leyland Steamship Company. He was unable to be at his desk today.

Jennings said he confessed to the murder of Mrs. Donovan "in order to save an innocent party."

"I refer to her husband," added the murderer.

It was well known that Mr. Donovan blamed Jennings for the troubles that had arisen between the Donovans. Mrs. Donovan, at the time of her death, had a divorce libel pending against her husband. She had been living with her parents again.

"Kid Carter"—using his pugilistic title—saved his confession until he had been sentenced to life imprisonment for the murder of McPherson in a South End saloon on New Year's Day.

Then "Carter" startled Judge Brown and others in the Suffolk Superior Criminal court room by confessing not only that he had murdered Mrs. Donovan, but also that he had committed "many murders."

"Carter's" confession was one of the shortest and strangest in Massachusetts criminal records. It began with thanks to Court and counsel and ended, with a boastful query as to what Judge Brown thought of it all.

Like Bolt From Sky.

While "Carter" had been suspected of the murder of Mrs. Donovan, none looked for a confession at this particular time.

The young pugilist had been convicted of the murder of McPherson and was in Charles Street Jail, awaiting sentence. He was brought before Judge Brown's session of the Criminal Court in the afternoon to be sentenced. The latter was regarded as a formality, because a life-term was a foregone conclusion.

But "Carter's" confession was anything but foregone, or even suspected.

After Judge Brown had passed sentence, "Carter" suddenly stood up in the cage and said:

"Your Honor, I want to say something."

Judge Brown gazed at the youthful desperado and murderer a moment and asked:

"Why didn't you speak before I passed sentence on you?"

But, without answering that question, "Kid Carter" went on, in high-pitched voice:

"I want to say something. I want to thank you for your kindness and my lawyers for what they have done for me.

"I killed Mildred Donovan. That is only one of many murders I have committed. That's all I have to say. What do you think of that?"

Nobody had anything to "think" for a moment. The court room gathering was simply stunned at the awful disclosure made by the pale-faced prize-fighter.

Stunned by Carter's Words.

Then gradually the picture formed itself on the minds of those present of the murder of Mildred Donovan. They recalled, bit by bit, that her body was found back of Holy Cross Cemetery in Malden on New Year's morning, that she had been attending a New Year celebration in Boston, the night before, that "Kid Carter" had been with her at least some of that evening, that "Carter's" name had been mentioned in connection with the case.

The spectators recalled that "Carter" had shot and killed William H. McPherson in a South End saloon New Year's Day. It was for this crime that he was in court for sentence. The spectators realized that "Carter" must have gone from one murder to another.

These thoughts flashed through the minds of one and another of those present after the statement of "Carter" died away in the final weird query: "What do you think of that?"

Judge Brown said nothing. He simply gazed at the murderer.

Court officers, who had been near "Carter," while the latter was awaiting sentence, made no move toward the youth.

Then spectators realised that court was being adjourned. The usual formalities of closing court were carried out.

Then court officers beckoned to "Carter," who rose. They led him out to the detention room, where arrangements were made to take him to Charlestown to serve his life-term.

Complete Confession of "Kid Carter"

Here is the complete confession of Kid Carter as given to the reporters in the detention pen while waiting to be taken to prison for life:

I want to give you gentlemen my statement. This is what I wanted to say in court. If it please Your Honor—just a minute, boys, I'm a little excited.

I wish to thank the court for the fair trial I had. I wish to thank Judge Cutler for all he has done for me in my case and also want to thank Lawyer Frost.

And last, but not least, I wish to thank Sheriff Quinn and his officers for the kind treatment they have given me while I was at the Charles street jail.

I want to tell it all, and I would like to tell it now. Of course, I admit the murder of Mildred Donovan.

I am confessing this in order to save any innocent party. I refer to her husband. Of course, he had nothing to do with it. I lived with her in Lynn and New York. I had a good reason for killing her. I was afraid that she would tell all that she knew about that Everett affair when we stuck up that man by the name of Hill.

Ready to Kill Anybody.

She knew all about it. I was afraid she would tell. Her father knew about it and he didn't like me. He was bringing pressure to bear on her. That's why I killed her. I had murder in my heart and was ready to put anybody out of the way that stood in my way. I had murder in my heart when I shot McPherson. I was making my getaway that day. I want to show you something. Look at this raincoat. There is blood here and here and here. This is MacPherson's blood. I bought this coat the day after I killed Mildred Donovan.

When I had the trouble with MacPherson I was just going to the South Station to go out of town. I bought the raincoat as a disguise.

Mildred Donovan would go to any place I wanted her to go. I had been out of town before that, and I came back here with a partner of mine to "stick up" the Metropolitan Coal Company's office at Revere Beach. It was a big cinch.

It was dead easy. The doctor said that Mildred Donovan died from an apoplectic fit. They are away off. It isn't the first time I have beaten doctors on expert testimony. I'm not telling this with any intention to brag. I am giving this statement voluntarily. Mildred Donovan died by my hand. Look at my thumb. See where this nail is broken? That happened in the struggle. But she died easy. It took eighteen minutes. She died at 7:50.

"All a Gamble."

I don't care! It's all a gamble. I played my cards. Today was the last one. I never did a day's work in my life.

I would have been better if I had been used right. When I was a youngster, the Chelsea cops beat me up. They used me bad. They hounded me. If it wasn't for that, I'd be all right today. But I've beaten the cops before. It was only in 1910 that I beat 'em out in Jackson, Mich. My partner, Bert Smith, was found guilty of second-degree murder out there.

But they couldn't get me. I got out it. I beat the expert medical witnesses at Ann Arbor and Harvard.

BACKACHE IS A DANGER SIGNAL

Kidney Troubles, Bladder Disorders, Rheumatism, and Serious Diseases Follow.

There are other symptoms, such as pains in the region of the kidneys, nervousness, dizziness, tired and wornout feeling, weak bladder, or urinary troubles, which are just as dangerous, for the slightest kidney derangement if neglected may develop into the deadly Bright's Disease, Dropsy, or Diabetes.

It is not only dangerous, but needless, for you to suffer and endure the tortures of these troubles, for the new discovery, Croxone, promptly ends all such misery.

There is no more effective remedy known for kidney, bladder trouble and rheumatism than this new scientific preparation, because it removes the cause. It soaks right into the kidneys, through the walls and linings, cleans out the clogged up pores, neutralizes and dissolves the poisonous uric acid and waste matter that lodge in the joints and muscles and cause those terrible rheumatic pains, and makes the kidneys filter the poison from the blood and drives it out of the system.

Three doses of Croxone a day for a few days is often all that is ever needed to relieve the worst backache or overcome disagreeable urinary disorders, and you can take it with the utmost confidence that nothing on earth will so quickly reach the worst case of kidney, bladder trouble, or rheumatism.

You will find Croxone different from all other remedies. It is so prepared that it is practically impossible to take it into the human system without results. An original package costs but a trifle, and all druggists are authorized to return the purchase price if Croxone should fail in a single case.

LATEST FROM TODAY'S STOCK MARKETS

Stock markets were dull this morning and prices worked lower. Pessimism appeared strong in trading circles. In the Boston market Boston & Maine declined more than two points in the first hour. Boston Elevated was down 1½ a few minutes after the opening.

The decline of 1¼ in such a stock as Amoskeag caused discussion about tariff cutting. Fruit was stronger. Some coppers advanced fractionally, including North Butte and Granby. Others which declined in early trading were East Butte, Mason Valley, Chino and U. S. Smelting.

Price changes in New York were narrow as a rule during the first hour. Most all of the leaders were lower. The market was very professional. First-hour transactions totalled but little more than 85,000.

Attempts to get President John D. Ryan of Amalgamated, now in Butte, to express his views on the metal and the market failed to elicit any opinion. It is said he has never before refused to give his views on those subjects.

New York Market Opened Lower.

The slowness of subscriptions for the St. Paul bond issue, the result of which has been awaited with great interest by the trading element in the stock market, was a bear influence when business began in New York. Under pressure a number of issues declined. The St. Paul situation was said to emphasize the unfavorable condition of the bond market as a whole, aside from its effect upon that particular road.

In initial transactions American Telephone went down ⅜, and among other losses were Steel common ⅜, Union Pacific ¼, Reading ⅜, New York Central ⅜, Missouri Pacific ¼, Canadian Pacific 1⅛, Atlantic Coast Line ⅜, American Smelting ½ and Amalgamated ⅛. Chesapeake & Ohio advanced ½ and Pennsylvania made a fractional gain.

St. Paul opened at 109½, or ⅛ under yesterday's final price.

The Curb was irregular.

In early trading the London market had a hesitant tendency which developed towards the close into a disposition to sag. American stocks were dull but above New York parity. Canadian Pacific continued firm.

St. Paul Bonds Sell Slowly.

Only a little more than $20,000,000 of the $30,000,000 St. Paul 4½ per cent. general mortgage bonds taken by a syndicate headed by Kuhn, Loeb & Co. and the National City Bank have been sold.

It was stated that all the bonds sold went to small individual investors, insurance companies and savings banks.

Although the bankers received an offer from a dealer for the unsold portion of the offering, the bonds will be retained by the syndicate, which intends to dispose of them in the same way as the bulk of the issue was placed, except that the price will be increased one-quarter of a point, to 98¾.

Trade Figures for March.

The foreign trade of the United States for March does not compare well with the trade during March, 1912, according to the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce. Figures compiled by the Bureau of Statistics give the value of imports for last month as $155,461,400 as against $157,577,038 for March, 1912; the exports during the same period aggregating $187,354,559, as compared to $205,411,462 during March, 1912.

London Copper Quotations.

In the London copper warrants market at the opening spot was down 6s 3d and futures 5s. In speaking of the advance by Calumet & Hecla of its price for Lake copper to sixteen cents a pound in the foreign market, it was stated: "Competitors say they have no knowledge of Calumet brands being offered in this market, indicating that at the moment it has sold all it cares to the home trade, but has some copper left for export business."

The electrolytic copper market is firm at 15¾ cents.

For the week ending yesterday copper exports totalled 7,364 tons, a comparative increase of 4,090. The April increase to that date was 5,004 tons.

Financial News in Brief.

The Great Northern road will spend $1,250,000 for snow sheds in the Rocky Mountains this year.

Before President W. H. Truesdale of the Lackawanna road sailed for Europe he was asked what he had to say about the full crew law: "They beat us and we will have to take our medicine," he replied.

Cleveland Electric Illuminating Company stockholders are offered the right to subscribe to about $1,300,000 new common stock at par to the extent of 18 per cent. of present holdings.

Frank Trumbell, chairman of the Chesapeake & Ohio, said after a meeting of the board he saw no reason for reducing the road's 5 per cent. dividend.

The strong Bank of England statement and the reduction of its rate reflected an improvement in the Balkan war situation. But the reduction had been discounted in the London stock market.

It is reported in the steel trade that the shortage of steel bars is acute. Some makers of agricultural implements are unable to get deliveries.

J. P. Morgan, son of the late head of the house of Morgan, has been elected a director of the New York, New Haven & Hartford road.

In regard to dissolution proceedings it was stated in New York this morning: "So far as could be ascertained the plan of the Union Pacific is chiefly to gain time for the disposal of the Southern Pacific stock of which the Union Pacific must divest itself."

The New York sub-treasury gained $149,000 from banks yesterday, and had gained $1,380,000 since Friday.

FORBES HITS STANDARD OIL "FLIM-FLAMS"

By B. C. FORBES.

Business Editor of the American.

Will the Standard Oil people never learn? Do they mean to continue indefinitely the flim-flamming of investors?

What would you think of it if you had been induced, by the declaration of regular dividends at the rate of twenty-five per cent. annually, to purchase a stock very highly spoken of and then, having paid $250 to $350 a share for it, were cooly told that your dividends had been not lowered but stopped entirely? Wouldn't you feel disposed to invite the postal authorities or the Department of Justice to investigate whether the responsible parties could not be placed behind prison bars? The price per share, let it be repeated, was not a few cents or a few dollars, but $250 to $350.

This is exactly what one of the Standard Oil Companies has done.

The dark lantern, hole and corner, open and shut methods that the Standard people have used for the undoing of investors, have been insulting to every sense of decency and square dealing, but nothing quite so bold as their action of yesterday had formerly been attempted. Without a moment's notice to outsiders who had all along been kept in ignorance, the Prairie Oil and Gas Company, which had never failed to pay at least $6 per share every three months, announced that the insiders—the directors—had quietly agreed to stop paying even $1 per quarter.

The oil trust was fond of bleating about the widows and orphans whose precious legacies had been intrusted to their guardianship and whose interests the directors had so much at heart. Well what of widows and orphans whose all had been invested in this Rockefeller stock, Prairie Oil and Gas? Oh, yes, it was most highly recommended by bankers supposedly close to No. 26 Broadway. It was no gamble, but a sound investment, paying 25 per cent. dividends and likely to pay much more later, the Standard Oil following declared.

How are the widows and orphans, dependent for their living upon this Rockefeller security, to procure the things needed to sustain existence now that their income, which they had been assured was so safe, has been suddenly cut off without one word of satisfactory explanation? Has No. 26 Broadway no tears to shed for them? Must they go hungry until the Prairie Oil directors are graciously pleased to resume dividend disbursements—after the price of their shares has fallen $100 or $200 each?

The stock slumped some $60 a share yesterday. What golden opportunities for those in the inside, those who secretly planned to stop payments.

BLACK FOXES

United States Consul Wesley Frost, Charlottetown, Prince Edward Island, reports as follows:

"A phenomenal expansion is taking place in the Black Fox industry on Prince Edward Island. Although a report upon this subject was published in the United States Consular and Trade Report for March 17, 1911, the development since that time has been so rapid and so important that an entirely fresh treatment is called for."

The ranch of the Massachusetts Silver Black Fox Company will be situated near Charlottetown, Prince Edward Island, and will contain fourteen pair best bred Silver Black Foxes, for which we have signed agreements.

Ranches on the Island having young foxes to sell will pay from 50% to 100% this year, and stockholders refuse to part with their holdings at double the original cost.

Prices on Black Foxes are steadily increasing. The business is secure, as the breeders will be unable to supply the demands for years to come.

The Massachusetts Silver Black Fox Company are offering a limited amount of their stock at par, $100.00 a share. As most all companies heretofore formed have been oversubscribed, those desiring to become interested in our company should subscribe at once. Taking into consideration the success of others engaged in the business, the stock in the Massachusetts Silver Black Fox Company should be worth double its par value in one year. 25% of amount subscribed for must accompany the application, and the balance on or before August 1, 1913. Write, telephone or call at our office for prospectus, which contains information from reliable sources.

No less than eight cars have been entered for the day and night non-motor stop contest promoted by the Chicago Automobile Club, to be run June 25 to 29, from Chicago to Boston. The first entry received was that of a Packard car, entered by E. C. Paterson. The remainder are two Abbott-Detroit cars, two Staver-Detroits, two Imperials and one Case car.

It is possible that Boston will be represented by at least one, if not two, entries from the Lenox Motor Car Company, as the local concern has taken considerable interest in the contest. The Hollander Motor Company is seriously considering the advisability of entering two Metz cars which, it will be remembered, did such excellent work in the last Glidden tour.

The reliability hill climbing and fuel economy test is scheduled to be held in New York on May 14 and 15 next. This competition is to combine reliability, hill climbing and fuel economy, for a total of 1,000 points. Reliability is to count 600 points, hill climbing and fuel economy 200 points each. The route will cover 265 miles, with one and one-tenth miles of climbing averaging 20 per cent. grade.

The winner in each grade will get a plaque mounted in wood. Special and sweepstake prizes will be given for the best all-round performances in the separate divisions of the contest, and a prize will be given for the driver who averages nearest in his class to the official time at a secret point between New York and Newburgh.

President George A. Kissel of the Kissel Motor Car Company has confided to a reporter of the Los Angeles Times some highly interesting figures regarding the existenceoutput of Kissel Kars since the company's organization in 1906.

In the first year of its corporate existence the company put out 200 pleasure cars, the second year 550. In 1908 the number grew to 725, in 1909 to 1,100, in 1910 to 1,500, and in 1911 to 1,700.

Last year 2,200 pleasure vehicles were built, and the number this year will easily reach 4,500. The first commercial car was turned out in 1910, and the output in 1912 was 400, with the schedule for 1913 nearly doubled.

JORDAN MARSH COMPANY.

MEN WANTED

ON TUESDAY, April 1, several hundred men working for the Draper Company, largely in their foundry department, stayed away from their work without notice to any officers of the company, and without asking for any changes in conditions of employment, or wages; on Thursday of that week, through a committee, they stated certain demands for changed conditions, which were refused by the company; since that time they have not returned to work.

We have employed in the recent past about 2,200 men in Hopedale; about two-thirds of our men have worked continuously, and are now at work; those who are out are on strike, and the strike is being managed by the so-called I. W. W.; the men who are out are substantially all Italians and Armenians, and most of them cannot speak the English language.

Our foundry is entirely equipped with moulding machines of our own manufacture; in that department of our work, we can give employment to several hundred men, who can earn good wages within a very short time after learning how to operate these machines, which are not difficult to handle; as soon as the men become accustomed to the machines, they will be paid for the amount of work done, and they can very easily earn excellent wages.

Men desiring employment should apply promptly to the Shop Office of the Draper Company works in Hopedale, Mass., and they will be given work; only those desiring permanent positions need apply. Telegraph and R. R. station, Milford, Mass.

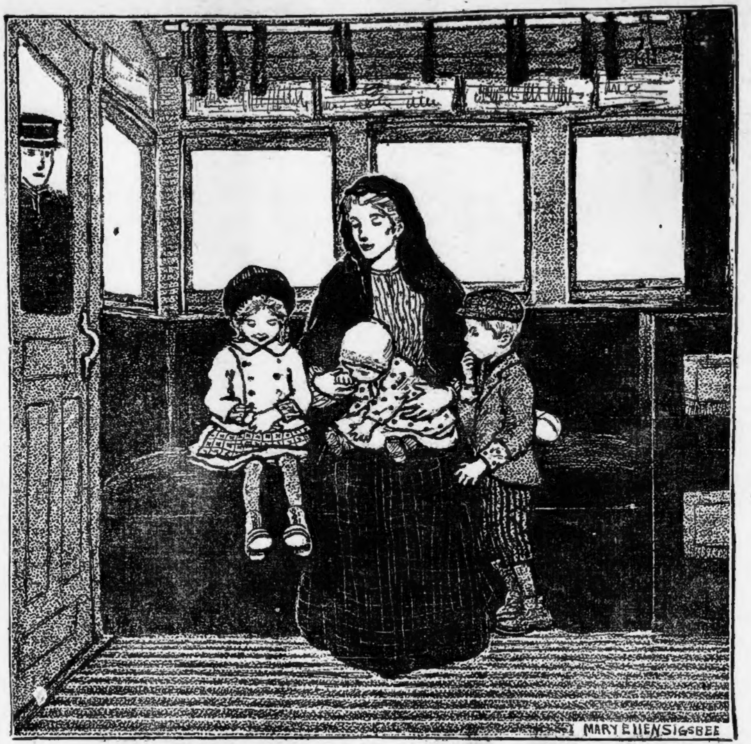
Hasn't She a RIGHT to Vote?



How can any but a brute and an ignoramus deny that this woman, the mother of children, has a right to share in the making of laws?

It is not a favor that woman asks when she demands the vote.

SHE SIMPLY ASKS HER RIGHT. She ought to have it and she WILL have it. Shame on the man who thinks his own mother unfit to vote.

(SEE EDITORIAL)

Was YOUR MOTHER Unfit to Vote?

If She Was, We Are Sorry for You. But That Is No Reason for Your Trying to Keep the Vote Away from Women Better Than Your Own Mother Happened to Have Been. Pity the Man Who Despises Women and Looks Upon Them as Inferior. And Pity the Women Whom He Has Known.

Copyright, 1913, by American-Journal-Examiner

The AMERICAN reproaches itself for not having more constantly and emphatically advocated and demanded votes for women.

It is an outrageous thing, a disgrace to men and a cruel injustice to women, that the mothers of this country should be forbidden to share in the making of the laws.

Look at the picture on this page. It represents the average good woman taking care of a family.

What man will dare say that this woman is not fit to vote or that she has not THE RIGHT to vote?

She brings the children into the world. She cares for them. She endures the drudgery, hardship and monotony of the home, while the man is away, engaged in work infinitely less trying.

The mother suffers the dreadful agony of childbirth, infinitely worse than any suffering on the battlefield, about which men talk so much.

And she suffers the pangs of anxiety and sorrow when her children are ill; she goes through an ordeal which to men is inconceivable when one of her children dies.

The whole load of the world is upon woman's back. She creates the entire race, the men and the women.

Unjust laws weigh heavily upon her.

Bad laws and failure to execute the laws destroy the character of her sons, and she suffers.

Inconceivably stupid and brutal are those who would forbid women the vote.

Nothing more admirable could be conceived than the wonderful courage shown by those women in England protesting in starvation and to the point of death against man's injustice.

Did you read the description of that noble old woman, Mrs. Pankhurst, tried by a judge and a lot of other MEN, and sent to jail for three years?

You talk about the courage of men. Where has a man shown the courage of that old woman, refusing to eat, defiantly telling her judges that she would come out of prison soon—DEAD OR ALIVE—and proving the courage to live up to her declaration?

Don't you know that that woman was only asking for HER RIGHT?

Suppose she had been an old MAN, brought before twelve WOMEN, and one female judge.

What would you think if you saw an old man judged by women exclusively, pitifully asking for the right to share in the making of the laws that sent him to jail?

Wouldn't the most ordinary, common, anti-suffrage drunkard and loafer in the streets sympathize with such an old MAN? How can any decent man help sympathizing with a woman under such circumstances?

Have not the women of the country a right to defy laws WHEN THEY ARE NOT PERMITTED TO SHARE IN THE MAKING OF THE LAWS?

Have not men from the beginning done infinitely worse things than the suffragettes of England ever did, in the effort to get the vote and freedom?

Did not the so-called noble patriots of this country in the early days resort to excesses that cannot even be described, when they were protesting against England's refusal to give them a share in representation, since they paid taxation?

We all talked with admiration about our Revolution, and about the fights THAT MEN MADE AGAINST MEN TO GET THE RIGHT TO VOTE AND CONTROL THEMSELVES. AND WE FORGIVE THE FACT EVEN THAT IN BOSTON "THE PATRIOTS" DROVE NAKED WOMEN THROUGH THE PUBLIC STREETS.

Why do we not show some of that admiration and sympathy and forgiveness for the women of England and for the women of other countries in their desperate effort to obtain for themselves justice and fair treatment?

To the man who opposes suffrage, or who sneers at the efforts of noble women to gain their right, we ask these questions:

Why do you despise women and think them unfit to vote?

WAS YOUR OWN MOTHER UNFIT TO VOTE? Have you so poor an opinion of your mother, of your sister, of your daughter, that you think her less worthy to exercise her judgment and share in government than some miserable creature soaking himself with whiskey in a corner saloon?

Every bit of gentleness instilled into you as a child you got from your mother. Every man is born a savage, and it is the mother who patiently and gently diminishes cruelty and violence and instills kindness and gentleness into him.

What an infamy for a man to say that the woman who is fit to direct him in his childhood, to govern him in his boyhood, and to inspire him in his manhood IS UNFIT TO CAST A VOTE.

When a man opposes woman suffrage and laughs at the idea, you may say to him, "Either you are a fool, ignorant and wilfully unjust, or you have been surrounded by very bad women from the beginning.

"You may be pitied for that, but you have no right to oppose justice to other women better than your own."

Women today are the heavily taxed class. The taxes used to be laid by government ON MEN. Men paid the road tax, and they paid stamp taxes and other taxes.

Today the chief taxes are laid BY TRUSTS ON WOMEN.

The Oil Trust, the Coal Trust, the Beef Trust, the Sugar Trust, the Flour Trust, the Ice Trust—these are forces of government that tax without representation, AND THEY TAX WOMEN WHO PAY THE HOUSEHOLD EXPENSES.

Don't you think that the woman who pays the taxes of the trusts would have intelligence enough to vote to stop this taxation?

Is not the woman good enough to educate the boys and girls, good enough to advise her husband, patient and kind enough to endure the hard lot of women, good and intelligent enough to share in the government of a country?

Woman is braver than man; she has proved it a thousand million times in childbirth. Woman is more devoted than man; the woman who will not sacrifice her life for her child is an exception.

And even in those fields of courage of which the men boast, the women prove themselves more courageous than the men.

They will sacrifice more for principle, and such women as Mrs. Pankhurts, and that young American girl, Miss Emerson, just released from jail, faint and starving and carried off in an ambulance, show a courage of which ninety-nine per cent. and more of the proud "brave men" would be incapable.

Women ought to vote, and they will vote. The man who opposes woman suffrage disgraces himself, and he indirectly casts reproach upon his own mother and upon the other women that he has known.

If you have been unfortunate enough to have a mother unfit to vote, KEEP YOUR MOUTH SHUT, and let others more fortunate than yourself give votes to the good mothers of this country.

The Public Will Appreciate Everything Mr. Pelletier Does in Behalf of Pure Food

The AMERICAN commends District Attorney Pelletier for his PROMPT and VIGOROUS efforts to enforce the law against those who may be guilty of selling rotten eggs to bakers for use in food products.

The law under which the District Attorney must act is none too effective. But he is doing the best he can with the authority at his disposal. The law does not provide for the PROPER PUNISHMENT of those who may be found guilty and in this respect it ought to be amended.

It does not require any argument to make the public realize the importance of compelling those who manufacture articles of food to obey the provisions of law which are intended to protect the public against poisonous food. Men who would make money at the expense of the health of the community can be reached by no other appeal than that which is addressed to their fears.

The branch of our government in which is reposed the power of putting such men in fear is in the District Attorney's office.

Mr. Pelletier is performing a MOST IMPORTANT DUTY when he makes it clear by his action that he proposes to enforce the law against the use of rotten eggs in food.

It is a good deed, Mr. District Attorney, and the public will APPRECIATE it.

POOR JACK

By MORTON BIRGE

"STARBOARD" and "Port," those honored terms
Of all who sail the bounding sea,
Are never to be used again,
So runs the Naval Board's decree.
Jack Tar must steer his tongue instead
To saying "Right" or "Left" at will.
Suppose they keep this up until
They run clear through the shipping bill,
And modernize each word that's said.

Instead of "Swabbing down the deck,"
Poor Jack will "Polish off the floor."
The "chef" will in the "kitchen" rule,
For "cook" and "galley" are no more.
A "mast" becomes a common "pole,"
An "anchor" might be called a "brake,"
And all the old expressions take
Such form as certainly would shake
The Jackie to his salty soul.

WHEN SILAS PLAYED

By MINNA IRVING

I'M sick of music on a reel,
And crazy rag-time tunes;
For opera I wouldn't give
A pair of pewter spoons.
From classic concerts and the like
I want to run away;
I'd rather hear the jigs and things
That Silas used to play.

He'd bring his fiddle up o' nights
When he was courting me,
And, bashful-like, would pick the strings,
And hold it on his knee.
And when we could no longer think
Of any more to say,
He'd pick it up, and take the bow,
And start right in to play.

We rolled the parlor carpet up,
'Twas red ingrain and new,
And moved the chairs and tables out,
And 'round the room we flew.
Though more than fifty years ago,
It seems but yesterday,
I tripped so lightly to the tunes
That Silas loved to play.

We married, and we prospered, too,
And came to live in town,
And for the ticker and the tape
He laid the fiddle down.
But life has never been to me
So carefree or so gay,
And music never half so sweet
Since Silas ceased to play.

THE STORAGE EGG

By PERCY SHAW

I MET a storage egg one day,
And, filled with subtle agitation,
I asked him what he had to say
Upon suspended animation.

He made no move to speak and so
I boldly put a simple question,
As to some facts I sought to know
On superhuman indigestion.

And though he looked profound, my eyes
Perceived he scorned all conversation
He even showed a dull surprise
For one in such a lowly station.

At last I smote him on the hip,
Half earnestly and half in banter;
He said no word, but with a chip
He broke and ran away instanter,

Pity the Poor Rich Girl

Dorothy Dix Says Her Lot Is a Hard One and Much More Deserving of Our Tears Than Many of the Woes of the Poor

By DOROTHY DIX

PITY the poor rich girl, who has nothing to do but to amuse herself doing things that bore her stiff. Her lot is, indeed, a hard one, and much more deserving of our tears than many of the woes of the poor over which we are accustomed to weep.

There has recently been a great furor over a young heiress, moving in the most exalted circle of English society, who ran away from home because she wanted to make her own living. The cable was almost torn up by the roots in an attempt to find out if the bold adventurer had come to America, detectives were put upon her track, and finally she was found and returned to her gilded cage, from which she will probably never have the courage to attempt another flight.

The young woman's mother was so prostrated with horror that she took to her bed.

Society was shocked, and shrugged its shoulders, and tapped its empty forehead with a significant intimation that there was something wrong with the poor girl's mind, for her mania was to do something terrible and incomprehensible.

She wanted to go to work. She wanted to be a doer, not a waster. She wanted to be of service to her fellow creatures, not a parasite on society. She wanted some real interest in life, not make believe ones. She wanted to be of some use in the world, and not a mere cumberer of the ground.

And she was rich! And she didn't have to work. And she could have every mortal thing that money could buy! And she wasn't satisfield.

But however her family and friends may feel over this poor girl's futile break for freedom, she has my hearty sympathy, for I can think of nothing else that human ingenuity has ever invented that would be such a martyrdom of boredom as to have to live the life of what we call "a society woman," and that is nothing but just one party after another.

Unless you happened to be built that way.

There are, of course, women who find their highest happiness in buying clothes, and who ask of fate no more blissful occupation than to be continually taking off one dress and hat, and putting on another dress and hat.

There are other women who can make a carer out of auction bridge, and who satisfy every need of their natures by rushing from card table to card table. There are others who keep themselves from perishing of inanition by pushing everything to the extreme, by turkey trotting harder than anybody else, by flirtations that border on the ragged edge of scandal, by spending thousands of dollars for lap dogs, and by rushing from place to place as fast as steam or gasoline will carry them.

And there are others whose highest ambition is to know the people that don't want to know them, and who consider a laborious life of striving well spent if it lands them at last within the sacred precincts of the four hundred, where all of your family affairs get into print.

To care for all of these things enough to make them worth-while you must be born that way, and that is what makes the tragedy of the rich girl whose brains were not cut on the bias and frilled in the middle and hobbled with a blue ribbon tied about them.

She wearies of the artificial interests of those who are forever at their wit's end to devise some new way of killing the time. She wants the real thrill of a real interest where you pit your own intelligence and skill against that of others, and struggle for a real prize. She wants to do something that is of some account, something that will upbuild. She wants work and to be a worker, not to be a dressed-up doll.

And the thing she wants most she can't have. Nobody will let her try, even, to find out what is in her, what strength she has, what are the measures of her talents. There is nothing left for her but to go in for philanthropy, and she hates philanthropy. She wants to save herself, not others.

And that's why I say, pity the poor rich girl. Her only salvation is to be born without any human qualities. That is if she is to be happy.

There is a great deal of criticism of women who want to do things, and we hear much of the discontent among women. People say of such and such a woman that she is rich, that she's got a fine house, and jewels, and automobiles, and money enough to buy everything she fancies; and they throw up their hands and say, "In heaven's name, why isn't she contented?"

The rich woman with brains and ambition and a desire to be of use in the world is as forlorn a figure as exists in the world. She is the victim of her wealth as much as the poorest person is of his poverty, and her life is far, far duller than that of any worker engaged in labor in which he is interested.
